Truman Plan For Health Insurance Starts Row

Requiring Workers To Pay Cost Hit As Socialized Medicine on 'Hill'

(Text on Page 12)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer.

A health insurance plan on a national scale, under which all Americans "who work for a living" would be "required" to contribute to a common fund, was recommended to Congress yesterday by President Truman. It immediately touched off a partisan row.

The President said several times his plan was not "socialized medicine," but Senator Taft (R., Ohio) said that it most certainly was.

Mr. Truman, contending that the health of this Nation is a national concern, said that the American people were the most insurance-minded people in the world and added that they would not be frightened off from health insurance simply because people have misnamed it "socialized medicine."

Suggests $3600 Basis

He reminded Congress that premiums for present social insurance benefits are calculated on the first $3000 of earnings in a year. He said it might be well to have all such premiums, including those for health, calculated on a somewhat higher amount such as $3600.

He said a broad program of prepayment for medical care would need total amounts approximately equal to 4 per cent of such earnings. How much of the total fund should come from insurance premiums and how much from general revenues, he said, was a matter for Congress to decide.

"The plan which I have suggested," he continued, "would be sufficient to pay most doctors more than the best they have received in peacetime years. The payments of doctors' bills would be guaranteed, and the doctors would be spared the annoyance and uncertainty of collecting fees from individual patients. The same assurance would apply to hospitals, dentists and nurses for the services they render . . ."

Not Working for Government

After repeating that he was not recommending socialized medicine, Mr. Truman said:

"Socialized medicine means that all doctors work as employes of government. The American people want no such system. No such system is here proposed.

"Under the plan I suggest, our people would continue to get medical and hospital services just as they do now—on the basis of their own voluntary decisions and choices. Our doctors and hospitals would continue to deal with disease with the same professional freedom as now. There would, however, be this all-important difference: whether or not patients get the services they need would not depend on how much they can afford to pay at the time."

Free to Choose Doctors

Mr. Truman said that Americans would be free to choose their own physicians and hospitals, and free also to pay for medical service outside the health insurance system—just as they are free to send their children to private instead of public schools, although they must pay taxes for public schools.

Likewise, he said, physicians would remain free to accept or reject patients. They would be allowed to decide for themselves whether they would participate in

Army Presents Gift to Housewife: Washable Woolen

By the Associated Press

American women can look forward to washable woolens, thanks to the War Department.

Lieut. Col. S. J. Kennedy of the Army Quartermaster Corps told a Senate special wool committee yesterday that military requirements had led to the production of woolen goods that can be washed as well as dry cleaned without shrinking.

The Army now is saving $1,500,000 monthly on its woolen socks bill over expenditures in the early months of the war because of the development, he said. GIs can get twice as much wear out of a pair of socks now because they can be washed in the showers or in a helmet with rainwater and still fit their feet, he added.

Manufacture representatives present at the hearing said the progress made by the Army in cooperation with the wooen industry would soon be reflected in the production of women's washable woolen undies and other things.

Congressman Posts Collateral In Traffic Case

Eberharter Declines To Discuss Car Which Dragged Policeman

Two traffic violation charges were filed against Representative Herman P. Eberharter (D., Pa.) late yesterday and a short while later $25 collateral was posted at police headquarters.

These were the newest developments in the traffic incident of last Saturday in which a car bearing a congressional tag and license plates issued to Eberharter dragged a policeman 30 feet and finally left him bruised and battered on the pavement.

The charges were filed following a meeting in the office of the Corporation Counsel attended by Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King, Capt. William J. Cunningham of the Traffic Division, and the policeman who was injured last Saturday, Pvt. Roy S. Bridges, 53, of 130 U st. ne.

Eberharter Declines Comment

Eberharter, who has refused to say anything about the matter, told The Washington Post after the charges had been made:

"I have nothing to say. It's up to the District officials."

Eberharter admitted that he had visited the Corporation Counsel office during the day and had talked to King.

(A sandy-haired man called on Kink while reporters awaited the outcome of the meeting to ask about the Eberhart case, but King said he did not know the man's identity.)

Earlier in the day, a woman who identified herself as the Congressman's wife said Eberharted would issue a statement later in the day "covering the whole thing."

"I'm not making any statement," said Eberharted when asked about this.

Bail Posted In Afternoon

Eberharter did not identify the man who had posted the collateral with the Traffic Division at Police headquarters at 5:20 p. m. yesterday. Nor did police identify him.

The charges against Eberharter are (1) that re disobeyed an official traffic sign, and (2) that he disobeyed an officer's signal.

Collateral of $10 was posted on

D. C. Faces Dual Threat

Transit Workers Urged to Stay On Jobs as Truce Nears End

5000 Phone Employes Await Ill. Call for Sympathy Walkout

More than 5000 metropolitan area telephone workers were "standing by" late yesterday for a possible Nation-wide walkout call in sympathy with 8700 striking operators in Illinois and northern Indiana.

Mrs. Mary Gannon, president of the Washington Telephone Traffic Union, representing 3000 D. C. operators saw little possibility an immediate walkout would occur here but said local action hinges directly on developments in Illinois.

"If they need support they'll get it," she declared.

Her statement followed receipt of a telegram from union officials in Chicago asking that the local here "stand by for support." A similar wire was sent to Carl Shultz, president of the District Federation of Telephone Workers, which represents 2000 plant, commercial and accounting employes.

A spokesman for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. here commented:

"We have not been given any indication by the union or otherwise that the Illinois strike will spread to Washington."

Telephone service in two Indiana counties and 115 Illinois communities was crippled by the operators' strike, staged early yesterday. However, the U. S. Conciliation Service moved immediately to achieve a settlement.

Both the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. and the Illinois Telephone Traffic Union said their delegates would have full power to negotiate a settlement of the wage issue that led to the walkout.

The company issued a statement contending the "only major issue"

Union to Get Report On Pay Negotiations At Midnight Rally

District Commissioners appealed last night to streetcar and bus operators to stay on their jobs.

Their statement was issued on the eve of a crucial mass meeting set for Turner's Arena at midnight tonight.

"The District commissioners are interested that there should not be a further cessation of the mass transportation facilities in Washington," the plea said.

"They consider it essential that such a stoppage should not occur in the National Capital in this critical postwar period of reorganization.

The union meets at midnight to hear a report from their special negotiating committee on the progress of wage negotiations with Capital Transit Co. officials and a Labor Department panel. A 14-day "truce" pact ended a day and a half transit strike November 7.

The Commissioners also offered their assistance to Labor Department concillators to avert a second strike.

At yesterday's meeting of the negotiators, which lasted two hours, it was announced that the truce will officially end just prior to the Thanksgiving holiday at midnight Wednesday—24 hours after tonight's meeting.

At the close of yesterday's session a brief statement that a recess had been taken until 10 a. m. today was made.

The until-now customary remark that the meeting had been "cordial,

Trial to Open Today

Nazi War Crimes Defendant Suffers Cranial Hemorrhage

Nuernberg, Germany, Nov. 19 (AP).—The international war crimes tribunal failed to rule today on last minute motions which threatened to delay the trial of the Nazi hierarchy, and an American spokesman said tonight the tribunal's silence indicated the trial would open tomorrow morning as scheduled.

In this final flurry preceding the opening of a trial without parallel in world history, one of the chief defendants, the hulking six foot, five inch Ernst Kaltenbrunner, former right hand man of Adolf Hitler, collapsed with a cranial hemorrhage.

The man who had terrorized thousands as chief of Germany's security department and criminal police, will not be able to quit his sick bed for the prisoners' dock for a considerable time.

One issue was removed when the Russians named Col. Yuri Pokrovsky, deputy Soviet prosecutor, to act as chief prosecutor in the place of Gen. R. A. Rudenko, whose illness had led to a Russian request for a delay.

The tribunal strongly indicated it would open the trial without Alfried Krupp, whom the United States, Russian and French prosecutors wanted to substitute for his ailing munitions king father Gustav Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach.

It was pointed out that the indictment provides for a blanket count against industrialists who helped foment the war, and if the court should hold the industrialists guilty as a group Alfried presumably would be tried later.

An American spokesman said the court probably would rule on pending motions tomorrow at the open-

U. S. Revamp Bill Passed By Senate

'Loop-Hole' Allowing Many Exemptions Of Federal Offices Discovered by Byrd

By the Associated Press

President Truman's 6-month-old request for power to reshape the vast Federal Government cleared the Senate yesterday with its final form still in doubt.

Just before Senate approval on a voice vote, Senator Byrd (D., Va.), constant economy advocate, discovered what he termed a "loop-hole" that might allow scores of departments, agencies and bureau to legally oppose any reorganization.

The Virginia Senator objected to a clause that would prohibit the President from touching agencies with "quasi-judicial" powers.

Allows Wholesale Exemptions

"This would permit a wholesale exemption it appears to me," Byrd told the Senate. "It is bad language."

"I agree it's too broad," said Senator Murdock (D., Utah), floor manager who for 18 days had been trying to push the measure through a seemingly disinterested Senate.

"We hope to improve upon it in conference," Murdock explained.

He referred to the joint Senate-House conference committee which must take the bill passed by the Senate today and a separate reorganization measure approved by the House on October 4, and adjust numerous differences.

Substitute Rejected

Earlier the Senate had rejected on a 40-to-25 roll call a proposed substitute offered by Senators Smith (R., N. J.), Donnell (R., Mo.) and Tydings (D., Md.). The vote followed party lines with two exceptions.

This substitute would have eliminated all exemptions, allowed the President to submit reorganization plans under special procedure to speed congressional action, and required affirmative approval of both House and Senate.

Tydings was the lone Democrat to join with Senator La Follette (Prog., Wis.) on the losing Republican side, while Senator Buck (R., R. I.) was the sole Republican to vote with the 39 Democrats.

Committee Overridden

This left intact the original Administration request that any presidential reorganization become effective after 60 days unless both Senate and House veto it. The Senate previously overrode its own Judiciary Committee's proposal that either Senate or House alone be granted the veto.

In addition to its language exempting "quasijudicial" agencies, the Senate bill specifically removes 15 agencies from the scope of the bill. They include the following Federal commissions — Interstate Commerce, Trade, Communications, Securities and Exchange, Power, Maritime and Tariff, three agencies dealing with railroad labor, the Federal Land Bank System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., District of Columbia Municipal Government, General Accounting Office, and the Army Engineers Civil Functions.

Gets Black Eye from Bilbo

Post's Poll Scores Bullseye With Washington Leaders

With a single exception, Washington officials and civic leaders yesterday hailed The Post Poll inaugurated in yesterday's Post.

The one black eye came from Theodore (The Man) Bilbo, (D., Miss.) and chairman of the Senate District Committee.

Except for Bilbo, legislators, District and Federal officials, and community leaders expressed enthusiasm for the new Post feature as a means of registering the views of the District's voteless citizens. The first poll showed a landslide 84 per cent of Washington residents in favor of granting District citizens the right to vote.

Bilbo had this to say about the Poll and yesterday's results:

"Read the Constitution. The Founding Fathers never intended that residents of the Nation's Capital should be allowed to vote. There is too much concentration of power here. And Congress certainly doesn't intend to amend the Constitution now.

"I don't think public opinion polls amount to a hill of beans. Washington residents have the right of petition. We have three Commissioners. Let the people go camp on their steps. The Founding Fathers saw what happened to Athens and Rome when those cities became topheavy with power and they took precautions that the same thing wouldn't happen here."

However, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes had this comment:

"The Washington Post poll ought to be useful both to residents of the District and to Congress and other Government officials as an indication of the trend of thought here. While I have no intention of indorsing all public polls, I think we have every reason to expect that a poll conducted by The Washington Post will be honest, fair and above board.

"I was not surprised that 84 per cent of those polled wanted a larger voice in their Government. If I had been polled I would have voted the same way myself," Ickes said.

John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners, said:

"The Post's accurate measurement of the city's representative views will be a great help to the District Commissioners. "I congratulate The Post on the poll. It is a very commendable undertaking."

Young pointed out that the District Building now will undoubtedly obtain a better cross-section of public sentiment, since the Commissioners usually only get local opinion in the public hearings.

Citizens' Associations all agreed that the findings of The Post public-opinion survey will give them "something to tack their arguments on" when seeking legislation.

Wilbur S. Finca, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said:

"The poll results on the suffrage question were just what I expected. I can see where the poll will have great importance on the Troops Rush To Iranian Revolt Zone

Government Acts To Halt Rebels in Spite of Uncertain Russian Attitude

Tehran, Iran, Nov. 19.—Iranian troops were rushed tonight to Soviet-garrisoned Azerbaijan Province, scene of armed outbreaks, despite uncertainty as to whether the Russians would permit them to enter the trouble zone.

On previous occasions Iranian forces dispatched to the north had been turned back, and the Iranians reported Soviet forces have prohibited the government from sending in gendarmes.

Parliament decided, however, to send two battalions to try to halt armed separatist Democrats reported advancing down the 230-mile railway from Mianeh toward Tehran.

Arms From Russian Trucks

Iranian concern tonight was increased by a government spokesman's assertion that rifles and machine guns were distributed to the separatists from trucks bearing Russian army insignia.

Tehran newspapers said the "rebels" were recently imigrated "strangers" wearing military boots and trousers, with civilian jackets and hats.

One complained that "certain enemies of this war have been better treated than Persia (Iran), who has been a faithful ally" who made her roads and communications available "for the aid of Russia."

(In Washington the newly arriced Iranian Ambassador, Hussein Ala, said the uprising was engineered by "disreputable and discontented elements" who might have infiltrated into Iran from the Russian Caucasus. The Russian troops, Ala said, were continuing their occupation of Iranian territory "without any justification.")

Communication Lines Cut

All communication with Azerbaijan, northwesternmost province of Iran, has been severed and there has been no news of the uprising since last night's statement that the rebels had occupied Mianeh and were marching toward Tehran.

(In London a foreign office spokesman said the British considered the Russian isolation of the affected area inconsistent with the Anglo-Soviet agreement assuring Iranian independence and sovereignty and pledging withdrawal of all foreign troops by March 2, 1946. Advices from northern Iran on October 22 said new contingents of Russian troops—including cavalry and infantry as well as tanks and air units—had arrived at Tabriz.)

(In Moscow there was no comment. Reports that the rebels were being supplied with weapons by the Russians, were being officially called to the attention of Russian authorities.)

2 Found Guilty In $24,600 Payroll Holdup

Charles J. Skiskowski, 44, and Michael J. Quinn, 37, were found guilty yesterday on two counts of assault in perpetration of a robbery in $24,600 holdup of two bank messengers here last March 30.

The District Court jury deliberated only 50 minutes. The men face 5 to 25 years in prison, or fines of $1000 to $10,000, or both, on each count.

Both men pleaded not guilty but Skiskowski, accused of driving the getaway car in the holdup of the National Bank of Washington messengers, pleaded that he had been merely a "lackey" for Joe McCann, third man accused in the holdup, who was killed in New York City by FBI agents.

Most Cars Cost More

Studebakers $1058; Fords Up $51-$83; GM Models Rise $115

Estimate prices for some of the new cars delivered at your door were revealed yesterday following the OPA's announcement of ceiling prices for the 1946 models.

Only a few comparisons of the 1942 ceiling prices and those for the new cars could be made. Ford and Studebaker are the only companies to receive specific ceilings and those cover only a few models.

General Motors officials here said they were interpreting the OPA's price cut of 2.5 per cent as an "across the board" cut, applicable to all models.

According to Ford Motor Co. spokesmen the two models which will be available immediately for sale—the two-door "Deluxe" sedan and the two-door "Superdeluxe" sedan—will be about $51 and $83 higher respectively than the 1942 models.

The price increase is due to several factors, it was explained. The OPA granted the Ford company a flat 2 per cent increase in the list price. Higher taxes, increased handling costs and increased freight charge account for most of the balance of the rasied prices.

Meanwhile, in Detroit, Henry Ford 2d, president of the Ford Motor Co., said the prices announced by the OPA "mean that, for an indeterminate period, we will have to sell our cars at a loss."

"The prices do not, in our opinion, properly reflect the changed economic circumstances in which a motor car manufacturer must operate today."

The announcement of the retail price lids came as 200 UAW union delegates from General Motors across the country met in Detroit

Jilted Czech Told Injections Made Nightfighter Black

Pilsen, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 19 (U.P.).—The worried-looking Czech woman appeared at American headquarters and asked where she could find "Nightfighter Willie P. Brown," who disappeared after promising to marry her.

Perplexed officers didn't find the name and asked her about the nightfighter angle.

She explained Willie told her his skin was black because the Army had given him injections to make him invisible at night. When he returned to the United States he would be given other injections which would make him white again.

Brown told her, she said, that the United States Army was filled with nightfighters, all especially recruited from a place called Mississippi.

De Gaulle Told To Retain Post Of President

Assembly Mandate Given as Armored Cars Guard Chamber

(See Editorial, "De Gaulle and the Reds," Page 8)

Paris, Nov. 19 (AP).—France's Constitutent Assembly, in an atmosphere bristling with guns and taut with excitement, asked General de Gaulle today to continue as interim president, but under conditions which seemed to have left the government crisis no nearer a solution.

With armored cars standing guard outside the chamber and pro-De Gaulle demonstrators surging through the streets, the assembly rejected the general's resignation, 400 to 163, and asked him to continue his efforts to form a coalition cabinet.

De Gaulle, who was not present in the packed chamber, accepted the new mandate when a delegation, headed by assembly President Felix Gouin, informed him officially of the action.

He will confer tomorrow morning with representatives of the three major parties—Communist, Socialist and Popular Republican Movement.

Reds Oppose Mandate

The Communists, whose demands for specific cabinet posts precipitated the crisis, voted solidly against the renewal of De Gaulle's mandate. They abstained from voting on a motion specifying that De Gaulle give equal representation in the government to the three big parties. The motion passed, 358 to 39.

Communist Jacques Dulcos accused De Gaulle of trying to form a government of "reactionaries" and declared the price of Communist participation was one of three cabinet posts—Interior, War or Foreign Affairs.

De Gaulle has said he could not accede to these demands because of France's interest in maintaining the "equilibrium" between the world's "two very great powers"—described by his associates as Russia and the United States.

Police Patrol Street

As the assembly met in the Palais Bourbon, thousands of police—some on horseback and many armed with tommyguns—partolled the Place de la Concord.

One small student demonstration on behalf of De Gaulle was quickly dispersed.

In the assembly, Dulcos, leading the opposition to De Gaulle, shouted sarcastically, "A Communist has no right to be Minister of War, or Minister of Foreign Affairs or Minister of the Interior. But it was the French laboring classes who were the spearheads of the resistance. They cannot be expected to be given a subordinate role now."

"We do not want any more than the others have," he cried, "but

Richardson Quotes 1940 White House Conversation

Overruled Him In Keeping Fleet At Pearl Harbor, Ex-Chief Asserts

By William T. Peacock
Associated Press Staff Writer

The late President Roosevelt was quoted yesterday as saying 14 months before Pearl Harbor that the Japanese sooner or later would make a "mistake" and the United States would enter the war.

Admiral James O. Richardson, special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy, told a Senate-House committee investigating the Pearl Harbor disaster, that the President made that remark to him over the luncheon table at the White House on October 8, 1940. At the time, Richardson was commander in chief of the fleet. He was relieved of that assignment on February 1, 1941.

The admiral also informed the committee that he had strongly advised the late President to remove the fleet from Pearl Harbor and bring it to the West Coast of the United States but that the President took the position the presence of the fleet at the Hawaiian base served as a curb on the Japanese.

Transcript of Testimony

Following is a transcript of Richardson's testimony on the conversation with President Roosevelt on October 8, 1940:

"I took up the question of returning to the Pacific Coast all of the fleet except the Hawaiian detachment. The President stated that the fleet was retained in the Hawaiian area in order to exercise a restraining influence on the actions of Japan.

"I stated that in my opinion the presence of the fleet in Hawaii might influence a civilian political government, but that Japan had a military government which knew that the fleet was udermanned, unprepared for war and had no train of auxiliary ships without which it could not undertake active operations, therefore the presence of the fleet in Hawaii could not exercise a restraining influence on Japanese action.

Held Sign U. S. "Meant Business"

"I further stated we were more likely to make the Japanese feel that we meant business if a train were assembled, and the fleet returned to Pacific Coast, the complements filled, the ships docked, and fully supplied with ammunition, provisions, stores and fuel and then stripped for war operations.

"The President said in effect 'despite what you believe I know that the presence of the fleet in the Hawaiian area, has had, and is now having, a restraining influence on the actions of Japan.'

"I said, 'Mr. President, I still do not believe it and I know that our fleet is disadvantageously disposed for preparing for or initiating war operations.'

"The president said, 'I can be convinced of the desirability of returning the battleships to the West Coast if I can be given a good statement which will convince the government that in bringing the American people and the Japanese battleships to the west coast we are not stepping backwards.'

Couldn't Always Avoid Mistakes

"Later I asked the President if we were going to enter the war. He replied that if the Japanese attacked Thailand, or the Kra Peninsula, or the Dutch East Indies we would not enter the war, that if they even attacked the Philippines he doubted whether we would enter the war, but that they could not always avoid making mistakes and that as the war continued and the area of operations expanded sooner or later they would make a mistake and we would enter the war."

Entered in evidence when Richardson took the stand was an exchange of correspondence between him and Admiral Harold R. Stark, then chief of naval operations, during 1940.

Their general tenor was that Richardson did not like keeping the fleet based at Pearl Harbor. It had gone there in April during annual maneuvers with the expectation of returning to the Pacific Coast early in May. Instead it was ordered to remain there. When Richardson asked an explanation, he was informed by Stark that the purpose was to exercise a "deterrent" influence on Japanese actions.

William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, asked Richardson about the White House visit after the admiral had given some preliminary testimony about his objections to keeping the fleet at Pearl Harbor.

Furnishes Written Account

Richardson pulled out a written account, explaining that he had prepared it in the quiet of his home because of the matter's importance.

Richardson was on the stand less than an hour and had not gotten well into his story when the committee recessed until today.

He is reported to have had a disagreement with the President also over proposed transfer of some warships from the Pacific to the Atlantic to aid in getting shipments to Britain. Such a transfer was made after Richardson was relieved in February, 1941, as fleet commander. He was succeeded by Admiral Husband E. Kimmel who held the Pacific command when the Japanese attacked.

Other Major Developments

In other principal developments in the investigation:

1. Senators Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Brewster (R., Me.) made a demand for the State Department's file on the case of Tyler Kent, employe of the American Embassy in London who was convicted of violating the British official secrets act. Kent recently completed his sentence. The two Senators indicated they were interested in whether the file disclosed any prewar agreements between President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Churchill.

2. Representative Gearhart (R., Calif.), a committee member, refused to give Democratic members the name of a naval officer he said had advised him that the U. S. cruiser Boise sighted a Japanese naval force at sea in the week before Pearl Harbor but did not report it because of orders for radio silence. Representative Murray (D., Pa.), asked for the officer's name and was backed up by Senator Lucas (D., Ill.). Gearhart has asked that the Boise's log be produced for the committee.

To "Prove" Signals Arranged

3. Ferguson told the committee he will prove later that the Navy knew the day before Pearl Harbor that a spy had arranged for visual signals fromo Hawaii to Japanese vessels lurking off the coast.

Richardson related that Admiral William D. Leahy, then governor of Puerto Rico, was also at the White House luncheon. After the war, Leahy became the President's personal chief of staff.

The question whether the Asiatic fleet should be strengthened was raised, Richardson said. This was a small fleet under Admiral Thomas Hart (now Republican Senator from Connecticut) and based in the Philippines.

Leahy was asked for advice.

"Leahy said whatever was sent would be lost and that he would send only old battleships," Richardson testified.

No More Ships Sent

He said he advised against sending any additional ships and that none was sent.

The Asiatic fleet eventually was destroyed in fighting to hold back the Japanese from the Dutch Indies.

On the point of keeping the fleet at Hawaii, Richardson told the committee:

"My objections to remaining there were primarily you had only one secure port. It was very crowded, inadequate recreation facilities, inadequate transportation, inadequate air fields."

The carriers, he explained, could put their planes into the air only when under way themselves and fields were needed for naval pilots to get in their flying time.

"I believe the fleet could be better prepared for war on the West Coast," he added.

Ferguson challenged the Navy's report that the coded message "climb Mount Niitaka" gave the Japanese task force the final signal on December 5, 1941 to attack Pearl Harbor.

In a series of questions directed at Admiral Inglis, the Michigan Senator said he is prepared to prove later that a Japanese spy's message from Honolulu to Tokyo, arranging visual signals to report movements of the U. S. fleet, had been translated by the U. S. Navy on December 6, 1941—the day before Japan attacked.

Appeared to Pull Trigger

Inglis told the committee Saturday, in relating the Japanese side of the Pearl Harbor story, that the Mount Niitaka message appeared to have pulled the trigger for the attack.

But Ferguson brought out in questioning that this message was not included in the Japanese fleet's operation order. The Michigan Senator indicated he felt the question important in relation to controversy over whether the final decision to attack was made as a result of the breakdown of diplomatic negotiations between the United States and Japan.

Inglis said information on the message was obtained from Lieut. Comdr. Y. Shiga, a Japanese pilot. Ferguson said Shiga also had mentioned the plan to use want ads broadcast over the Honolulu radio station to keep the Japanese task force informed of American fleet movements.

Kimmel, Presumably

The name of Admiral Husband E. Kimmel was brought into the investigation for the first time yesterday as the committee tried to learn who ordered the United States Fleet lined up like "sitting ducks" just before the attack.

Representative Bertrand G. Gearhart (R., Calif.) asked who gave the order to line up the fleet opposite Ford Island, in the harbor, where it was an easy target for Japanese planes.

Inglis replied that it "presumably" was Kimmel, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet at the time.

The committee learned yesterday that Admiral Osami Nagano, chief of the Japanese naval general staff, testifield recently at Tokyo that he alone decided—on November 3, 1941—to attack the Hawaiian bastion.

Nagano's statement was taken during an inquiry conducted by subordinates of Gen. Douglas MacArthur at the request of the congressional committee. The Tokyo testimony has been placed in the record of the current hearing.

Dr. Kettering To Address Nine Engineer Groups

Dr. Charles F. Kettering, president of the General Motors Research Corp., will address a combined meeting of nine Washington engineering societies at 8:30 p. m. today at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

Members of the following organizations are expected to attend:

He said that foreign and French newspapers alike had expressed suspicion of Communist aims in France.

"They shower us with calumnies and accusations," he said. "They try to manage our national honor. We are marshaling all our strength now in defense. We will not permit ourselves to be under suspicion. We have always held in focus the national interest alone."

Socialist Deputy Andre Philip said his party would try "either by a meeting between assembly officers and De Gaulle or between chiefs of the three parties and De Gaulle to find a formula of accord."

He declared the Communists, largest party in the assembly, could not be left out of the government and that if De Gaulle fails again in his efforts "we will see what we have to do to form a tripartite government with another chief."

Ex-Policeman Gets 21-Year Sentence On 61 Charges

Baltimore, Nov. 19 (AP).—Paul H. Maenhoudt, 42-year-old former policeman was sentneced today to a total of 21 years in he penitentiary after pleading guilty in criminal court to 61 charges, involving losses totaling $32,680.

Prosecuting Attorney Thomas Biddison said that Maenhoudt admitted he was the self-designated "phantom burglar," who several times telephoned newspapers to report his own robberies.

Reading of the charges, the largest number against any one defendant in the history of the criminal court, was waived and Judge Herman Moser ruled that it was unnecessary to take testimony.

Legion Women Urged to Back War Training

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP).—An official of the American Legion Auxiliary today proposed what she termed a "new slogan" for the group—"no more wars; universal military training to speed peace and aid world security."

Mrs. Hurlburt Anderson of Boulder, Colo., national legislative chairman, said the slogan would "bring into action the principle that we have supported for the past 25 years."

"The people in your communities," she said in her annual report, "must be brought to realize that unpreparedness has never prevented our Nation from becoming involved in war."

Mrs. Anderson said she had talked with servicemen who had seen action in almost every theater of the war just ended, and "everyone of them said emphatically 'we must be prepared to keep the peace!'"

The following names were submitted to caucuses today by State lelegations as nominees for office for the ensuing year:

Mrs. Jenny Craven, Charlotte, N. C., unopposed to succeed Mrs. Charles B. Gilbert, Norwich, Conn., as president.

Eastern division vice president—Mrs. Archie Miller, Bethlehem, Pa., and Mrs. Butler Ward, Rutland, Vt. (contest).

Western division vice president—Mrs. Worth Montgomery, Glens Ferry, Idaho. (unopposed).

Northwest division vice president—Mrs. A. W. Plaehte, Wahpeton, N. Dak. (unopposed).

Reelection of the natoinal secretary and treasurer was virtually assured with no nominations for successors to Mrs. Gwendolyn Wiggin McDowell, Indianapolis, and Mrs. Cecelia Lentz, Indianapolis, secretary and treasurer, respectively.

2 Going to Trial Tomorrow for Whisky Charge

Trial of a North Carolina man and woman charged with illegal transportation of 36 cases of whisky valued at $1800 is set for Wednesday at 2 p. m., in Fairfax Trial Justice Court before Judge Robert W. Stump.

The two, Mrs. Florence Punch Alexander, 40, a taxicab driver from Morgantown, N. C., and Edward Walter Cline, 40, gasoline station operator, Hickory, N. C., have been released under $500 bond.

They were arrested on U. S. Highway No. 1 in Fairfax County last Wednesday by Monroe K. Bryant, Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board inspector, and Officer Thomas E. Denty of the Fairfax County police.

Women's Leaders Back Training Plan

Two Epokesmen Favor Drafting Girls In Peacetime; United Nations Need Stressed

Spokesmen for three women's organizations indorsed President Truman's universal military training program yoesterday in testimony before the House Military Committee.

Two of them said they had no oobjection to drafting women for wartime training in time of peace.

The witness as the committee went into the third week of hearings, with less than 10 of its 27 members present, were Mrs. Lafell Dickinson, Washington, presidenot of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Lulu E. Bachman, Detroit, chairman of the Michigan Branch of the Committee for Universal Training of Young Men, and Mrs. Ernesta Barlow, New York, vice president of the Committee for Military Training of Young Men.

All three expressed the opinion universal military training was necessary for the security of the United States and the success of the United Nations Organization.

"I think that's perfectly splendid, and I have two daughters," Mrs. Dickinson said when Representative Shafer (R., Mich.), asked if she objected to treating young women the same as men in a peacetime draft program.

Mrs. Bachman said she also favored the drafting of women but believed it should be dealt with in separate legislation.

Both Mrs. Dickinson and Mrs. Bachman emphasized that the views they expressed were their own and not necessarily those of their organizations.

Jap Colonel Admits Order To Kill Cruelly

Manila, Nov. 19 (AP).—A short, pugnacious Japanese colonel testifying today at the war crimes trial of Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita bluntly admitted he had urged officers to "kill American troops cruelly . . . not with one stroke."

He was Col. Masatoshi Fujishige, who commanded troops in Batangas province where other witnesses have testified that more than 25,000 civilians were slaughtered by the Japanese. He was asked about a speech he had made there to seaborne troops he was instructing in land fighting.

At first he denied telling them to kill women and children. A transcript of his speech was read to him.

"Kill American troops cruelly," it said, "do not kill them with one stroke. Shoot guerillas. Kill all who oppose the Emperor, even women and children."

The colonel then, with violent gestures, admitted he said it, but added he told his men to kill women and children only "if attacked" by them.

Rice Crop Up

Crowley, La.—The official rice crop season opened here recently with farmers starting the harvest of 540,000 acres, which is 7000 acres above the average for the last 10 years. Production was estimated at 23,542,000 bushels, which is 6 per cent above the 1944 crops.

UNRRA Press Freedom Rider Denounced by Post Editors

Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, and two members of his staff yesterday cautioned the House Foreign Affairs Committee against tieing up funds for Europe's starving millions with "ungermane so-called freeedom-of-the-press riders."

Meyer told the House group freedom of the press is a worthy objective, at home and abroad, "but it has no place at all in this legislation."

Accompanied by Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Post, and John J. Corson, research director, he testified in support of the new and probably final $1,350,000,000 authorization for United Nations relief and rehabilitation.

Lehman Resents "Carping"

Herbert H. Lehman, director general of UNRRA, who had sat through four days of mostly critical questioning by Republican committeemen, meanwhile dramatically retorted to what he termed "carping" criticism of UNRRA. He told the committee he had "no apologies" and urged them to speed the new authorization bill to prevent "a break in our supply line this winter."

The so-called "freedom of the press" rider was imposed by the House on the earlier 550-million-dollar appropriation rounding out the United States contribution to UNRRA for this year. The bill and its legislative restriction, barring use of the fund unless United States press representatives are permitted to cover UNRRA operations in countries affected, is still pending before the Senate Appropriations Committee. A move is under way to clamp the same rider on the new authorization.

Future Peace at Stake

Meyer told the House group the world's hopes of future peace are at stake in feeding Europe's hungry—that rioting and violence are inevitable unless supplies are moved quickly.

"Never before," he said, "has a nation been so clearly appointed to be the savior of nations."

But it was against implications of the House rider that Meyer particularly warned. For one nation in 45 to impose any conditions, freedom of the press or otherwise, would simply send it back to the 44 other nations for approval, further delaying supplies, he said. Not only would it hold up distribution of direly needed food and clothing, he testified, but would launch the United States on an entirely new course of unilateral action.

Politics and Starvation

Called to the stand on the same point, Jones termed the press rider "a needling operation against Russia" and said it would have the effect of "playing politics with starvation."

Jones testified that newspapermen sent into Europe or the Balkans to cover UNRRA operations would necessarily have to write against a political backdrop. There would be "friendly" and "unfriendly" stories, he said, depending on the editorial policy of each newspaper.

"Which would Congress accept?" he asked. "This is a Government operation, not our job. It seems to me you should rely on official Government reports . . ."

Jones said he is convinced the rider was aimed solely at Russia "since we can now get into every country except Russia . . . I am hopeful the day is soon coming when Russia will lift censorship. There are many signs pointing that way."

Corson, former UNRRA deputy assistant now with The Post, said the legislative rider is not only "undesirable" but unnecessary, since UNRRA has insisted from the start that its own observers have access to any country receiving relief.

British Museum Gets Magna Carta Copy

London (AP).—An original of the Lacock Abbey copy of Henry III's 1225 reissue of the Magna Carta has been presented to the British Museum by Miss M. T. Elliot. The only other Lacock copy is preserved at Durham.

A beautiful document, the Lacock Abbey copy shows the Magna Carta in its final form, as it still appears on Britain's statute books. It is in a remarkable state of preservation, with a nearly complete impression of the Great Seal of King Henry III.

Forrestal Urges Security Study By Baruch

Detroit, Nov. 19 (AP).—Secretary of the Navy Forrestal suggested today that Bernard M. Baruch be named to head a presidential commission to study the entire question of national seurity.

Forresta. said that Baruch, a frequent adviser of presidents, is "a citizen who has had intimate familiarity with our organization for war in two great struggles."

The Navy has recommended that such a commission be named before any action is taken to merge the armed forces into one department.

In a talk prepared for the economic club of Detroit, Forrestal said national security is "a question whose ramifications spread beyond the jurisdiction of any single congressional committee and beyond the cognizance of any miltary organization."

July 1, 1946, Deadline

The secretary said:

"In order to dispose of the charge that the Navy's suggestion of this commission is based simply on tactics of delay, linger and wait, I propose that the commission be give a deadline for the conclusion of its work of July 1, 1946, so that its results would be available for the deliberations of Congress immediately after that date.

"The commission should study the import of new weapons of warfare on our national security," Forrestal declared. "If we reorganize the armed forces today, how do we know that the new organization will conform to the potentialities of new weapons? Perhaps the commission will recommend a new independent service using guiding missiles instead of one conglomerate service. Perhaps the strategic air force of big bombers as we know it will be judged as dead as the horse and buggy."

Hits Extremes of Discussion

Forrestal described as "unadult" both extreme schools of thought on sharing the atomic bomb secret with the rest of the world.

One of these groups, he said, wants to "hug the secret to our bosom"; the other would make the discovery available to anyone, even without being aware yet of its full implications."

The recent statement of policy issued by President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Forrestal said, "sharpens more than any other utterances that I have noted the argument for a creation of a world union."

Barush, when advised at his New York office of Secretary Forrestal's suggestion, declined comment.

UAW Asks Arbitration Of GM Dispute

Detroit, Nov. 19 (AP).—Arbitration of the bitter wage dispute between the CIO United Automobile Workers and General Motors Corp. was proposed today by the union.

Asserting that "we want to avert a strike," Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO vice president, said the union proposed to the corporation that "we submit to immediate arbitration our controversy over 30 per cent increases in wage rates without price increases."

He added that the union has asked for a written reply to the proposal not later than 4 p. m. tomorrow.

Reuther's announcement was made at the close of the opening meeting of the UAW-CIO General Motors Council, consisting of representatives of union locals in GM plants throughout the Nation.

Three Provisions Announced

The proposal, Reuther told a news conference, contains three stipulations:

1. That the parties submit the dispute to a three-man board of arbitration composed of one representative of management, one of labor and a chairman selected by the other two members.

2. The board of arbitration shall have full access to the books and records and other documents of both parties which in the judgment of the board are essential to an intelligent and factual solution of this dispute.

[The United Press quoted a General Motors spokesman as saying: "I thought so, they stiH want to get a look at our books."—Editor's note.]

3. The board of arbitration shall make a final and binding decision of this dispute; any wage increase ordered by the board shall not be used as a basis for a price increase for any GM product for the duration of such award.

Called "Last Resort"

R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO president, who attended today's session of the union's GM council, said following the meeting that the arbitration proposal was "not an ultimatum," but that it wsa "the last resort" in the dispute.

As the union council was in session, George Romney, general manager of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, asserted at a news conference that a strike or close-down of General Motors "would shut down all but one other passenger car producer in the country within a week."

That one other company, Romney said without naming it, "would attain only about 50 per cent production." He said that all but the one company, which he intimated was the Ford Motor Co., used equipment such as spark plugs, ignition harnesses, thermostats and other articles manufactured by General Motors.

There is a Better Way
TO PREPARE FRIED OYSTERS
It's easier, quicker, and saves fats

No batter... no messiness. Simply dip the oysters in water, roll them in Golden Dipt, and drop into the frying pan or deep fat fryer. That's all there is to it.

And, that's the way chefs in leading hotels, restaurants and clubs now prepare oysters. The 'jackets' stay on and are dry instead of soggy with grease. And, the whole coating is full of the good old oyster flavor, because Golden Dipt absorbs the natural juices of the food and is grease resistant.

You simply won't know oysters at their best until you have tasted them fried the Golden Dipt way.

Dextrinized Golden Dipt contains milk and eggs and seasoning. There's nothing to add. Comes in 6 oz. and 10 oz. shaker top round cartons. Stays fresh indifinitely in the pantry.

At meat and seafood counters, and on grocery shelves at better dealers.

Travel by Air To Be Safest, Frye Predicts

Oklahoma City, Nov. 19 (AP).—It will require 15 years to make aviation the safest way to travel, Jack Frye, president of Transcontinental and Western Air and a noted flier, estimated today.

He told the National Aviation clinic here that airlines must provide greater safety than any other form of transportation, and outlined these additional objectives:

1. Providing air services "able to meet schedules consistently under all conditions."

2. Maintain high standards of service to the public.

3. Avoid hasty rate reductions and put fare cuts behind the achievement of safety, dependability and service.

4. Assume leadership in encouragement of foreign trade.

Gov. Robert S. Kerr and Mayor Robert A. Hefner welcomed the several hundred delegates, consultants and observers to the clinic, begun in 1943 with a view to postwar aviation planning.

Fairfax County Jury Indicts 4, 2 in Robbery

Four indictments were returned yesterday by a Fairfax County grand jury at the opening session of the November term of Fairfax County Circuit Court.

With DeWitt Crickenberger as foreman, the jury returned a joint and Arthur W. Duncan charging indictment against James J. Wood them with robbery in cononection with the theft of a taxicab owned by Charles W. Morine.

Wood also was indicted for the robbery of Charles R. Williams, driver of the taxi. Both men entered pleas of not guilty when arraigned.

The grand jury also returned true bills against Lorraine Howard and Wilson N. Smith, both of whom were charged with grand larceny. Miss Howard entered a plea of not guilty and a judicial writ was issued to the county sheriff directing him to arrest Smith, who was not in custody at the time of his indictment.

Holiday Screen Fare Stepped Up a Notch; Notes of the Theater

FOR YOUR HOLIDAY gorging, there will be four new screen exhibits coming to the midcity, first-run screens this week, instead of the seemingly normal three—let the drama desks fall where they may!

Preceded by a soldout Vivtory Bond Premiere tonight, the attraction at RKO-Keith's Theater, beginning tomorrow morning will be RKO-Radio's tumultuous, Technicolor production of "The Spanish Main," with which will be coupled—as also at the bond premiere—Frank Sinatra's "The House We Live In."

Charles Boyer

With Paul Henreid and Maureen O'Hara costarred, and Binnie Barnes, Walter Slezak, Barton MacLane, John Emery, Ian Keith, J. M. Kerrigan and a fleetload of others at the top of the supporting cast, "The Spanish Main" is a superlative buckle-swasher, packed with tempestuous action and practically everything else essential to excite audience reaction. Last showing of "This Love of Ours" begins at 5:30 p. m., today.

In his single-reel—one-story—"House We Live In," "The Voice" has done a compact and excellent job in behalf of racial and religious tolerance, singing a couple of songs in the process.

But Thursday, Thanksgiving Day itself, will be the big day for the first-nighters.

On that day, the Earle will be breaking out the Warner Brothers production of "Confidential Agent," costarring Charles Boyer and Lauren Bacall; "George White's Scandays," with Joan Davis and Jack Haley costarred, will be bowing in at the Metropolitan, and at Loew's Capitol, Margaret O'Brien, Jacgie (Butch) Jenkins, Edward G. Robinson, Agnes Moorehead, James Craig, et al., will be demonstrating for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that "Our Vines Have Tender Grapes." John Galvin's symposium of hocuspocus and demonstrations of mesmeric powers will occupy the stage.

In the other downtown precincts, things will be about as you would expect. "Weekend at the Waldorf," with Ginger Rogers, Walter Pidgeon, Lana Turner, Van Johnson, Edward Arnold, George Zucco, Samuel S. Hinds, Robert Benchley, Xavier Cugat and his orchestra and a Waldorful of others in Technicolor, will hold over at Loew's Palace, as well "Col. Blimp," also in Technicolor, with Roger Livesey, Deborah Kerr and Anton Walbrook starred, at the Little. At the Columbia, the transplanted attraction will be the Twentieth Century-Fox Technicolor fable of "The Dolly Sisters," with Betty Grable and June Haver in the title parts. Beginning Friday, the Hippodrome will revive Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of Sinclair Lewis' "Arrowsmith," which yesterday morning's rescreening proved to be as good now as it was back in 1931—which was very good, indeed, with Ronald Colman and Helen Hayes costarred.

Tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in the Circle Theater, RKO-Radio is holding an invitational trade review of "The Bells of St. Mary's," hailed by who have seen it as one of the greats of this or any other year. With Bing Crosby and Ingrid Bergman costarred under the direction of Leo McCarey, who also produced, and Dudley Nichols as scripter of the story written by McCarey, this one is said to to be hot on the heels, if not a little ahead, of "Going My Way." This morning, at the same hour, they are running off "What Next, Corporal Hargrove?" in the high Loew projection room, with many of the original cast in the sequel to the first M-G-M "Hargrove" opus. More of both later—unless the alarm clock breaks down.

Will Do It Again

Signs and portents point to a record success on the part of the Washington theaters in their shoulder-to-the-wheeling in behalf of the Victory Loan drive.

With the Warner Brothers' Central Theater already under the wire, John Marcon, manager of the Metropolitan, has exceeded his house quota of $140,000 by having moved E bonds to the tune of $140,925, as of November 14.

Manager Ralph B. Hagenbuch, of the Fairlawn Theater, and Nathan Stovitz, of the Takoma, are the third and fourth to exceed their Treasury allotments. The Fairlawn has $20,525 in E bond sales to show for its quota of $14,000, and the Takoma is well along on its second lap, with $22,000 worth of E bonds sold, as against a stipulated $18,000.

If this sort o fthing keeps up, the boys will do it again—only more so!

Dots and Dashes

Free tickets to the AAF's "Wings of Victory," mighty air panorama—not a painting or a peep-show—opening Wednesday at the National Airport, are now available to bond purchasers at all film theaters in the District . . . This exhibit will be on display daily, beginning tomorrow from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. . . . Bond buyers will be privileged to inspect free the interiors of practically all types of fighting planes that helped win the war . . . The Washington Variety Club is doing all right by its welfare fund this year . . . A net of approximately $30,000 is reported from the recently sponsored Redskins football game in Baltimore, and rough estimates of the proceeds from last Saturday night's tenth annual dinner-dance ran to something like $36,000—including souvenir program and corollary promotions all allied with the most successful function in the club's 11-year history . . . Thanks to Smiley Burnette for the implied compliment to the nonexistent editorial singing vioce . . . The popular "Western" star, on the Republic lot with Roy Rogers, just mailed in two bound books and a flock of sheet music running up a total of 90 cowboy and Western songs—a surprising number of them written by the old boy himself . . . You should oughty hear us sing 'em, heaven forbid!

Pair of Shoes From GI 'Best' Gift to Wac

Denver (U.P.)—Wac Corpl. Rae Lanphere of Denver never thought there would come a time when she would welcome a pair of GI shoes or a bar of soap instead of flowers or a box of candy. That was before she joined the Wacs.

Back after serving in Australia and New Guinea, Corpl. Lanphere tells of living in tents and wearing men's GI khaki pants and heavy shoes—which usually were borrowed from some generous soldier.

When she wasn't working as a stenographer in a photo intelligence detachment, this veteran spent her free time in Army hospitals. There the Wacs talked to the boys, wrote letters for them and red to the men whose eyes had been injured.

Corpl. Lamphere says she would rather date a GI in a combat zone in the South Pacific than a soldier in this country. She says: "Out there the boys haven't seen white women for so long that they treat them like queens."

Gossip From Gotham

New York, Nov. 19.—Martin Weiss, the S. S. commandant of the Dachau horror camp, went on trial before a U. S. Military Court. When Dachau was liberated, Weiss shaved his head, donned prisoner's clothing and lost himself among the 32,000 prisoners in the camp. During the checkup process he was discovered and arrested. But Weiss denied his identity. He had the papers of one of the 200,000 prisoners who were cremated at Dachau, and insisted they were his . . . "If you're not Weiss, nothing will happen to you," said the liberating officers, turning him over to three Polish prisoners. He confessed.

Another of the defendants in the trials arising from the Dachau atrocities is Dr. Schilling. His job was to inject a malaria virus into prisoners, and try to effect a cure. Dr. Schilling protested: "I am an objective scientist. I was finding a cure for malaria, from which the whole world would benefit" . . . "But you injected 80 prisoners who died as a result," an officer reminded him . . . Ah, but 78 of them would have died anyway, from malnutrition, tuberculosis, etc.," said Dr. Schilling . . . "But you injected 80 people—human beings, human souls," the officer stated . . . "They were Russians and Poles," the Nazi scientist replied. "In America you work on guinea pigs. What's the difference?"

In Calcutta a few weeks ago, Chakravarti Rajagopalachari, the Indian Congress leader, was introduced to Marland Gander, the British war correspondent . . . "What did you say your name was?" asked the Indian leader. "Marland Gander," the correspondent told him . . . "Marland Gander," repeated Chakravarti Rajagopalachari. "My, what funny names you English have."

Mary Healy, the film actress, is the wife of Sergt. Peter Lind Hayes, who now is in the Pacific. Just before Sergeant Hayes left New York he reminded Miss Healy about the necessity for keeping her weight down. "But I haven't gained any weight in years," the actress insisted. "We'll see about that," said Sergeant Hayes, and took her into a drug store where there wa sa scale. . . . "You go first," Miss Healy suggested. . . . Sergeant Hayes stepped on the scale, dropped a penny into the slot, and out came a card. He glanced at it, then told his wife, "It's okay. You don't have to weigh yourself" . . . The card read "186 lbs." On the other side was a photo and description, "the lovely, ever attractive starlet, Mary Healy."

Neal Sullivan, the newsreel man who was wounded when a time-bomb destroyed the Naples postoffice, finally came home and reported to his home office. Tell us what happened, Neal?" his boss asked him . . . "To make a long story short," said Sullivan, "I put my expense account into the postoffice box, and it blew up."

Stuart Davis, the artist, is having a one-man show at the Museum of Modern Art. One of his best jobs is the mural he painted at WNYC, the municipal radio station. The mural is 8 by 14 feet, painted on a large wall. Davis was anxious to have it in his one-man show. And since Mayor LaGuardia dislikes modern art, the artist knew that Fiorello wouldn't object. He therefore had the mural removed, wall and all, and took it to the Museum of Modern Art.

Richard Frankensteen, the CIO leader who lost the Detroit mayoralty election by 50,000 votes, was in the Cub Room of the Stork Club. "Too bad. To miss, by so little, being in the mayor's mansion in Detroit," a friend consoled him . . . Frankensteen looked around the Cub Room—where he was surrounded by Spencer Tracy, Gene Tierney, Morton Downey, Ann Sheridan, Celeste Holm, Joan Fontaine, Jinx Falkenberg, Charles Cushing, Mrs. W. Averell Harriman, Herbert Bayard Swope—sipped his champagne, puffed at his long, expensive cigar, and said: "I'm not so sure I didn't win."

Marlene Dietrich and Jean Gabin will be on the board of judges for the Drama and Film school at the Biarritz American University . . . Edward Lasker will become an independent film producer . . . Jack Belden, who covered the European war for Life magazine, will cover the Far East for Collier's . . . Oscar Levant, who holds the coffee-drinking championship at Lindy's and Toots Shor's, is preparing a coffee version of "The Last Weekend" . . . One of Herman Mankiewicz's friends came to his house and reported: "I've just sold my new script, paid off the mortgage on my house, signed a new contract, paid all my debts, deposited $25,000 in the bank, bought a car and now I'm driving to New York." Mankiewicz turned to his wife and said: "Sarah, dance with the gentleman."

BUILDS STRONG BODIES 8 WAYS!

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

...PUBLIC and Congressional opinion regarding the atom bomb has moved so rapidly that the Truman-Attlee statement just barely caught up with it. A few weeks ago, the Truman-Attlee plan to share the atom secret if other nations reciprocated would have been considered revolutionary. Now some Senators and many scientists think it doesn't go quite far enough.

Chief reason for the rapid change in public opinion has been the educational campaign staged by the scientists and some senators.

For instance, scientist Milton Burton of Oak Ridge, Tenn., went to see Senator Chan Gurney of South Dakota. Gurney, a sincere and able gentleman, devoutly believes that the sun rises and sets in the War Department's Building across the Potomac. Some of his friends suspect that he takes out a prayer rug and does obeisance in the direction of the Pentagon every morning. To him a brass hat can do no wrong. Thus the Army's plan for airtight control of the atom bomb to him was perfect.

However, he listened politely to Oak Ridge scientist Burton. Burton wanted to Outlaw the atom bomb altogether, but the Senator from South Dakota remained unconvinced. Finally, Burton pulled his trump card. He unfolded the danger of setting off the nitrogen chain. This is one thing the scientists have been deadly afraid of.

"You realize, Senator," explained the scientist, "that if enough bombs were dropped, of sufficient size, they might set off the nitrogen chain and the entire world would go up in flames. We would simply be another flaming star in the heavens, later a barren desert. People from other planets would look out and say, 'Aha, Nova! A new star!'"

Scientist Burton was deadly serious. So are other scientists. Tthey say it is quite possible that a sufficient number of atom explosions would ignite the nitrogen in the atmospher and the entire earth would be burned up, just as other planets are today.

McKellar Converted

ANOTHER OAK RIDGE scientist, Charles D. Coryell, went to work on the family of Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee. So also did William Pollard, a professor at the University of Tennessee, but now working in New York. McKellar, a powerful, energetic figure in the Senate, had not even wanted to appoint liberal young Senator Brien McMahon of Connecticut as chairman of the Atomic Bomb Study Committee, even though McMahon introduced the resolution. And when McKellar finally consetned to go along with McMahon's appointment, he stacked the committee with reactionaries.

However, when scicentists Coryell and Pollard finished explaining the dangers of the A bomb, the Tennessee Senator actually got down from his presiding officer's chair to make one of the most statesmanlike speeches the Seante has heard on atom control.

Another Senator who has seen how a cut-throat international race to get control of the atom might wreck all civilization is Republican Senator Alexander Smith of New Jersey. Smith spent several wekes on a New Jersey speaking tour both educating and sounding out public opinion regarding the bomb. He reports that the people generally are ahead of Washington in believing that the secret must be used as a means of working out international cooperation and permanent peace.

Meanwhile, scientists and some Senators make two chief criticisms of the Truman-Attlee control plan. They say (1) that the plan must be worked out by the heads of states, not by the Foreign Ministers who just failed at London; (2) that it was a mistake to put future control in the hands of the United Nations, since the United Nations already has proved a disappointing skeleton, inadequate to cope with the intricate problems of peace. The atom bomb, they feel, can be used to create a real system of world cooperation—not subject to the veto of one power.

USS Missouri Paperweights

JUST BEFORE the giant battleship Missouri was about to leave Pearl Harbor for the East Coast last month, it was published that she was held up by "trouble." Here's what the trouble really was:

The spot on the deck where MacArthur signed the surrender consisted of wooden deckboards. Under orders from someone, the Navy Yard tore up the entire section of the deck and replaced it with new wood.

Then the old boards on which MacArthur and the Japs had stood was turned over to the woodworking shop at the Navy Yard and made into paperweights.

But what burnt up enlisted men was that the paperweights were then given to the brass hats. Not one enlisted man was able to get a souvenir of the memorable surrender occasion, though thousands of them had given their lives to help achieve it.

Capital Chaff

NAVY EXPLANATION of why General MacArthur's photo was omitted from the official exhibit of war leaders is that they sent a naval officer recruited from Hollywood to Brisbane at $7 per diem to get the picture. It was explained to MacArthur's headquarters that when all the photos were collected they would be presented to the Nation at FDR's library at Hyde Park. The photographer waited a couple of weeks at $7 a day, but MacArthur refused to post . . . . That was why Mexican, French and British generals were included in the Navy's photo exhibit of war leaders, but not MacArthur . . . . Gen. Clayton Bissell, Chief of Army Intelligence, is now on a trip to South America. The State Department asked him to steer clear of Argentina, because they didn't want it to appear we were sending them any distinguished visitors at a time when we frowned on their Fascist form of government. But Bissell ignored the request, went to Argentina anyway. . . . Eleanor Roosevelt was a guest of the Henry Wallaces during her recent Washington visit. She was feted "off-the-record" by the female contingent of Washington correspondents . . . . Mrs. Truman still flatly refuses to hold regular press conferences, has all her announcements made by her secretary, Reathel Odlum, and Edith Helm, White House Social Adviser. . . . The John Boettigers (she was Anna Roosevelt came to Washington from Seattle the other day looking for new newspaper worlds to conquer. He used to run the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Merry-Go-Round

MRS. TRUMAN took a long-delayed step toward mending her relations with the ladies of the press by inviting them to a White House supper . . . However, a lot who were left out were more miffed than ever . . . The dinner was delicious—turkey, sweet potatoes, three different kinds of ice cream . . . Mrs. Truman went out of her way to be informal. There was no head table, she just plunked herself down among several guests and started eating . . . Dress at the dinner was optional Mrs. Truman wore a long gown, her daughter Margaret a short one . . . Margaret was the most excited member of the party. "I am going to flunk an exam on account of you girls being here tonight," she said. "I was supposed to study. I'll send you my report card when it comes" "Mrs. Truman took her guests downstairs to the White House projection room after dinner to show them a new picture, "Weekend at the Waldorf." It was selected by Margaret . . . Last year at a similar party staged by Mrs. Roosevelt, the picture was "The Voice of China" . . . Ladies of the press peppered the evening with whispered remarks about the contrast between Truman and Roosevelt hospitality. You can't please all the people all of the time.

Arlington Women Hear Standings In Bond Campaign

Standings of Arlington women's clubs in the Victory Bond drive were announced yesterday as organization members were invited to attend a bond rally and free movie November 26 at 1:30 p. m. at the Glebe Theater.

With three weeks of the drive completed, the Ashton Heights Women's Club leads other county organizations in bond solicitation at county theaters. Goal for the women's division is $575,000 in E bonds.

Other club standings are Clarenford Women's Club, second highest in reported sales; Arlington Women's League, third, and Thomas Nelson Page Chapter, DAR, fourth.

McGahey Leaving R. F. & P. After 39 Years of Service

Robert E. McGahey of 404 Russell rd., Alexandria, will retire from the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad March 1, 1946, after 50 years of railroad service.

He is the designer and inventor of the McGahey automatic tracks gate, a remote control electropneumatic device used to stop "runaway" or wild cars.

Developed in 1926, his invention is used by the Potomac Yards of the R. F. & P. and by other roads including the Pennsylvania Railroad and New York, New Haven & Hartford line.

McGahey is a native of Alexandria, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John McGahey. He was educated in parochial and public schools of Alexandria and took post-graduate work in advanced mathematics and mechanical drawing.

He started with the Southern Railway System in Alexandria as a messenger and telegrapher in 1895, later becoming a machinist. During 12 years with the Southern he became general foreman of the engine house and shops.

In 1907 he began 39 years of employment with the R. F. & P. Railroad in Alexandria where he is retiring as master mechanic.

McGahey is married and has two sisters living in Alexandria, Miss Kate McGahey and Miss Emma McGahey. He and Mrs. McGahey are planning a vacation trip to Florida.

Free Food for Camps

Saginaw, Mich.—Uncle Sam is going to offer free food next summer to nonprofit organizations operating camps and recreation centers for children. Through a plan of the Commodity Credit Corporation, the donations will stem from surplus food bought by the Government and not needed for lend-lease, the armed forces or the Government's price support program. However, the food will not be distributed until the surpluses develop.

Thief Sets $4000 Blaze to Steal Farmer's $50

A designing thief set off a $4000 blaze on a farm near Lay Hill, Md., to stage a $50 robbery.

This was the theory offered yesterday by Montgomery County police following the destruction by fire of hay and grain barns on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Allan and discovery that the Allan house had been robbed of $50 while attention was centered on the blaze.

It was about midnight Sunday and the Allans were counting their money, proceeds from the sale of grains and chickens. They had planned to bank the money the following morning.

Allan noticed a red glare in the sky, then saw his hay barn was afire. While Allan ran to save the family car which was parked in a haymow, Mrs. Allan called gremen, leaving the money in her purse on the living-room table.

The Allans joined Sandy Spring volunteer firemen as they battled the blaze.

Allan returned to the house to get his coat and as he entered the living room, he observed a Negro, clad in dark clothes and wearing an Army fatigue cap, rummaging through the drawers. The Negro fled.

A checkup disclosed he had escaped with the Allans' $50.

Police believe the Negro was watching through a side window as the Allans counted their money and started the blaze to draw them from the house.

British Fear New Outburst By Indonesian's

Batavia, Java., Nov. 19 (AP).—British military officials today expressed fears that a new wave of fighting might break out in central Java, where thousands of armed Indonesian Nationalists were massing as Indonesian radio stations called for "war on the British."

An Indonesian broadcast, declaring "war" on the British, asked Indonesian youths to reinforce Nationalists at Semarang, where a British brigade was clamping on tight controls after the slaying of three British officers.

Another Indonesian broadcast Saturday night declared:

"This is the last night of peace. Tomorrow we shall start and either kill the British or drive them from Java."

This broadcast came from Nationalist headquarters at Jogjakarta, now swarming with armed youths. The Indonesian "army" is drilling openly in nearby camps. The Indonesians say a munitions plant in Jogjakarta already is supplying a steady output of ammunition for their forces.

The Dutch news agency Aneta said there were unconfirmed rumors that "an army of Indonesian extremists, at any moment now, will open a large-scale offensive on Batavia."

Aneta said fighting broke out in the capital city again this morning, and that troyyel service was disrupted for the first time since the Allied landings September 15 when Indonesians tipped over a car and used it for a barricade.

The British announced they were "steadily clearing the disturbed area" of Semarang. In Soerabaja, where fighting continued into the tenth day, the British mopped up areas already occupied and shelled areas where Indonesian guns were believed to be located. One officer said resistance had stiffened slightly and the native were employing better tactics. British casualties remained low.

Man Indicted For Operating 'Torture Club'

The story of a "Torture Club" in which teen-age children were initiated by candlelight into weird pin-sticking sessions was revealed yesterday by the District grand jury.

The jury indicted William Trysdale, 33, manager of the Academy Theater, 535 8th st. se., on charges of carnal knowledge involving a 13-year-old girl.

Police said he told a group of boys to get other children for the organization of a torture club and that he would let the members into the movies free fo charge as well as help them become Hollywood stars.

11 Top Japs Arrested in Kamikaze Plot to Murder Reds

Tokyo, Nov. 19 (U.P.).—American authorities today investigated a report that survivors of the Kamikaze Suicide Corps plan to assassinate 12 Japanese Communist leaders December 1 and then commit suicide on the anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack.

Investigation of the threat began a few hours after Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced the arrest of 11 high Japanese war leaders including a former premier.

The threat was made in a postcard sent to a minor Communist organizer recently released from jail. The card was signed with a Japanese fascist's name, but was believed a forgery. However, the warning was investigated because of rumors that survivors of the special "Divine Wind" attack corps were plotting acts of violence. The card said "21 survivors of the Divine Wind Corps will carry out our plans and kill 12 of your leaders.

"It is in this way only that we feel that true democratic government can be obtained from Japan. On December 7 we will disband as an underground organization, apologize to the Emperor at the gates of the imperial palace and join those of our comrades who preceded us in dying for our nation."

Brig. Gen. E. R. Thorpe, chief of U. S. counter intelligence in Japan, warned that former Japanese leaders would not escape unnoticed into new political groups and said he was investigating new poliitcal parties being organized.

The 11 leaders arrested were Gen. Kuniaki Koiso, premier in 1944, Yosuke Matsuoka, violently anti-American foreign minister who signed the tripartite agreement with Germany and Italy; Toshio Shiratori, former ambassador to Italy and described as the "most rabid" of all militarists; Baron Sadao Araki, former war minister who demanded that Japan eliminate the Russian menace once and for all.

Baron Shigeru Monju, "ring leader of the Japanese war lords," one-time commander of the Kwantung army; Kazunobu Kanokogi of the Black Dragon secret terrorist society; Funanonake Kuhara, statesman and industrialist; Yoshihisa Kuzuu, leader of the Black Dragon society.

Iwane Matsui, leader of Japanese "ideological warfare" designed to unite the peoples of conquered Asia; Jinzaburo Masaki, who reportedly inspired the "young officers' revolt," and Jiro Minami, minister of war during the Manchurian incident.

2 Groups Try to Save Labor-Industry Parley

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Concern over the growing public conviction that the labor-management conference will not work on the problem it was assigned by President Truman led to meetings yesterday by two groups, each trying to prevent a complete collapse.

1. The conference "Big Six," composed of heads of the six participating labor and industry organizations, constituted themselves into an informal steering committee.

Although President Eric Johnson of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce denied that the group was established as a "rescue committee," it was clear that its principal objective was to save the conference from deflating like a tired balloon.

2. Public members of the conference, consisting of Chairman Stacy, Conference Secretary Taylor and Secretaries Wallace and Schwellenbach, met after yesterday's executive committee session.

Alarmed Over Prospects

No public statement was made of what transpired, but it was learned that they are alarmed over poor prospects for the conference's reaching its major goals.

Theoretically, the public members are not to interfere with conference proceedings, since business and labor asked for, and received, sole responsibility. Nevertheless, the public group feels that failure of the meeting will reflect on the Government.

Further, the public members are reported to believe that they have trusteeship responsibilities, at least, for seeing that the conference deals with the problem set by Mr. Truman—to "recommend answers to the public demand for machinery to prevent or settle industrial disputes."

The subject of disputes machinery, in the form of arbitration and fact-finding bodies, also was talked over by the "Big Six," but it was learned that they made no progress in their discussions. Meantime, none of the six working committees of the conference is known to be making concrete recommendations in this field.

Permanent Group Hinted

The most hopeful forecasts to be heard yesterday for the conference's ultimate achievement were that it might recommend that every labor contract provide arbitration for settlement of disputes arising under terms of that contract. Johnson, acting as spokesman for the "Big Six," indicated that there was general accord on this proposal.

These agreements, however, already are general in most important union contracts. Furthermore, thye do not apply to the most serious kind of strikes, those over wages, hours and working conditions which usually arise at the time when a new contract is being negotiated.

Johnston also gave a broad hint that his group was considering maintaining itself as a permanent "consultative" body on labor-management relations, possibly working on some of the problems left unsolved by the conference.

Not a 'Burner'

Marylander Censors Nazi School Books

Frankfurt, Nov. 18 (U.P.)—Dr. A. E. Zucker, a slim, quiet professor from the University of Maryland, reports each morning to the former cloakroom of an I. G. Farben building and puts in an entire day reading German schoolbooks.

Zucker is a censor, not a bookburner.

"We want banned Nazi books to remain to show the Germans how to wthey once sank," he said. "The books won't be used in schools, but will be preserved and will be available to anyone with a valid reason for reading them."

Some Semi-Approved

He has banned 25 per cen of the German schoolbooks he has read, but some of these have been semi-approved, meaning they can be used if specified sections are cut out.

Zucker said the Nazis did not insert propaganda in new editions of old texts, but often wrote new and highly propagandized introductions. Of books written in the past 10 years Zucker said, "I can tell from the cover pictures that some of the books are thoroughly Nazi. Even books for deaf mutes were full of Nazi propaganda. I don't see how some of those skunks couold write what they did."

Some Typical Stories

"Typical of their stories was the girl whose happiest day of her life was the moment Der Fuehrer patted her on her head," he continued. "Here are some typical problems in arithmetic: What would the population of Germany be today if Hitler's marriage laws were enfroced in 1890; how many square kilometers did Germany lose because of the Versailles treaty?

"Typical history book statements were: Bismarck helped German unity but only under Fuehrer was Germany really unified; there were many good anti-Semites in the world but only under the Fuehrer was anti-Semitism properly carried out."

Plot in Congress to Kill Truman's Job Bills Reported

By the Associated Press

Opponents of the Administration's "full employment" bill may try to kill it by including an amendment for permanent FEPC.

Chairman Manasco (D., Ala.) of the House Expednitures Committee, which is handling the measure, said yesterday he had heard reports that such action is contemplated.

And Representative Hoffman (R., Mich.), another committee member, also told a reporter some legislators think "we might as well lump all the full employment, FEPC and jobless-pay bills into one heap and let them die together."

Bills to make the present wartime FEPC a permanent agency have been pending on Capitol Hill for several months but have not reached the voting stage.

Manasco said, in an interview, that so far as he is concerned the "full employment" measure, as such, already is dead.

He would not commit his committee to this point of view, but he said he believes "the final measure will not be a full-employment one."

Poscibility of early action on the measure still is dim. Manasco said the subcommittee trying to rewrite the bill has met several times, "but has not reached agreement yet on anything."

President Truman asked recently that a bill be sent to the floor by Thanksgiving. Manasco said this was not likely, but that some version possibly would be available before Christmas.

Air Priorities Restoration Now Termed Unlikely

Although many servicemen now returning to the West Coast from the Pacific will be flown to East Coast cities, it is unlikely that air priorities and other wartime restrictions will be imposed on United States airlines, it was learned last night.

An ODT spokesman said there was "little chance" that priorities would be restored.

He pointed out, however, that within the next few months from 300,000 to 500,000 servicemen will be arriving at the West Coast each month. Of those to be sent to the population centers in the East at least 85 per cent will travel either by Pullman or by air.

A spokesman for the Transcontinental & Western Air Lines also discredited the priority rumors. He said he would be "very much surprised" if priorities are brought back.

Son Who Saved 5 From Fire Rejoins Family

Billy Ryan, 17, who saved five members of his family from the blaze that destroyed their home at 1128 Florida ave. ne., Friday morning, and his brother, James, 12, were discharged from Casualty Hospital at 1 p. m. yesterday.

James, overcome by smoke and suffering from shock, was rescued by a fireman and taken to the hospital immediately. Billy suffered first-degree burns but did not enter the hospital for treatment until 2:30 a. m. Saturday.

The homeless family of 10 last night was divided among relatives. Billy, Jimmy, Ada, 16, Betty Lou, 14, are staying with a married brother, Edward, jr., and his wife at 1343 H st. ne. With them also is Mrs. Hazel Carroll, their married sister, her husband, Joseph, and their two children, James (Butch) and Rose Marie.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ryan, sr., are living on a screened-in porch at the home of Mrs. Ryan's sister, Mrs. Hazel Donohue, at 1120 Penn st. ne.

Twelve-year-old Jimmy Ryan is still ill, Mrs. Ryan said last night, but Casualty physicians said he would be happier at home. He cried often in the hospital, Mrs. Ryan said.

"We don't have a nickel," she told The Post.

The Post's First Poll

When it was decided to devote the first Washington Post Poll to the question of District suffrage, there was no doubt in our minds as to what, in general, the result would be. Residents of Washington are American citizens at heart, even though they are denied the greatest single privilege of citizenship. The great majority of them are no less eager to vote than are residents of the States. Our first poll was centered on this issue solely as a means of measuring, by scientific sampling methods, the extent of what was already known to be a widespread popular feeling.

The poll indicates that 84 per cent of the residents of the District wish to have suffrage restored. Only 10 per cent like their disfranchisement and another 6 per cent are undecided. In other words, the sentiment in favor of democratizing the Capital is overwhelming. That is true of all the categories polled, whether they are home owners or tenants, poorly educated or college trained, white or Negro. The slight variations between the responses of these different groups is insignificant compared to the emphatic "yes" returned by all of them.

Of those who favor suffrage in the District 86 per cent think they should be permitted to vote for both local and Federal officials. Here is a fact of great significance to the strategists who are planning campaigns on the suffrage issue. It means that the people will not be satisfied with national representation alone any more than they will be satisfied by home rule alone. District representatives in Congress, should the promise of the Sumners-Capper bill be fulfilled, would have to work for an elected local government if they wished to stay in office. And local councilmen, if a home-rule system should come first, would have to campaign for national representation. Restoration of the vote in any form would undoubtedly be a great stimulus to both causes.

The results of the poll naturally suggest, therefore, a full unification of efforts on the part of the 84 per cent who want the vote restored. Since success for one cause would doubtless foreshadow success for the other, it is extremely shortsighted to carry on separate campaigns. The Post hopes that this demonstration of overwhelming sentiment in favor of both home rule and national representation will lead to a united movement to demand of Congress the rights that are automatically accorded the people of the States.

Molotov's Speech

An illustration from our own columns shows the necessity of checking everything that is said about Sussia. Some days ago, in an editorial on Foreign Commissar Molotov's speech, we stated that in Russia "only party members are entitled to vote under the Soviet constitution." This is incorrect. The Soviet constitution of 1936 replaced the selective ballot of 1924 with universal suffrage. Article 135 provides that all USSR citizens who have reached the age of 18 years, irrespective of race nationality, sex, creed, education, residence, social origin, or property status are entitled to take part in the election of deputies. The elections, moreover, are secret, and the number of votes that have been cast since 1936 represents a remarkably high percentage of the population.

We are glad to make this correction. The system in vogue in Russia, however, is not what Americans mean by a representative system. This is apparent from Article 141 of the 1936 constitution which governs the selection of candidates for election. It is there said that the right to nominate candidates is secured to "public organizations and societies of the working people, Communist Party organizations, trade-unions, cooperatives, youth organizations and cultural societies." Members of the nonparty organizations in this list may not be Communist, for in Russia membership in the party has to be won by service and devotion, but the organizations are controlled by the Communist Party. In point of fact, therefore, the working of the 1936 constitution deprives non-Communists of the privilege of nominating opposition candidates, and thus preserves the dictatorship of the Communist Party. The list is a single one, and voters are limited to a yea or nay choice.

At the same time the 1936 reform represented a vast improvement upon the limited ballot of 1924. Maybe the time is ripe for another improvement. This is what was suggested some time ago by Dr. Arnold D. Margolis of Washington in an address before the University of Pennsylvania. He suggested the repeal of Article 141—on the grounds that the Soviet system is now mature enough in Russia to warrant the step. Certainly the rival notions of democracy underlying the foreign policies of Russia and the United States would be brought nearer to reconciliation by such a reform.

De Gaulle And The Reds

For frankness and clarity General de Gaulle's radio address to the French people last Saturday is almost without counterpart among utterances by politicians. There were no evasions, no obfuscations, no apologies, no covert appeals to passion or prejudice.

Instead he stated briefly, objectively and in the plainest possible language the nature of the parliamentary crisis in which his government now finds itself.

As the result of the recent elections, the Communists have become the strongest single political party of the Constituent Assembly, but are considerably short of a majority, even among the parties which have hitherto been supporting General de Gaulle and his program of national unity. In the tabulations of the total popular vote, the Communists ran slightly behind the Mouvement Republicain Populaire, a new party grown out of the Liberation movement and considered primarily representative of Catholic political ideas and influences. In the composition of the Constituent Assembly, however, the Communists have two more seats than the MRP and nine more than the Socialists, who are the third largest party.

Emboldened by their success, the Communists have demanded for themselves one of the three most important places in the composition of the new French cabinet, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of War or the Ministry of the Interior. The first, as General de Gaulle said, would give them control of foreign policy and diplomacy, the second would give them control of the army, and the third control of the police. Thus General de Gaulle would have been placed in the position of relinquishing control of one of the three departments most essential to the external and internal security of France, without relinquishing responsibility for its actions.

General de Gaulle went on to state what is very well known, but what no other statesman has had the boldness to say openly and bluntly, that diplomatic relations between "two very great political powers," that is, the United States and Soviet Russia, are now in a state of great tension, and that future peace of the world depends upon whether this tension can be eased or removed. Any suspicion that French foreign policy is to be controlled by Communists, even though it might not signify any diplomatic offensive, would be calculated to increase rather than diminish the tension. Besides, as he explained with the same candor, it would disrupt his own foreign policy of maintaining an equilibrium between the interests of Moscow and the interests of the Anglo-American powers. Having thus made his position as plain as words could make it, General de Gaulle called upon the Assembly either to support him in his resistance to the Communist demands or to replace him as head of state.

Thus the showdown between De Gaulle and the Communists, long understood to be inevitable, has come much sooner than was anticipated. It would seem that the Communists themselves have forced the showdown, for had General de Gaulle yielded to them in this matter they would thereafter have had him, so to speak, in their pocket. The Communist power could have been challenged only at the cost of a complete overturn of the government. At this writing the issue of the French cabinet crisis, and with it the political future of General de Gaulle, remains in doubt. But it seems to us that it will afford a test of the theory, so often expressed, that a great many international suspicions and jealousies could be avoided, and the danger of wars greatly reduced, if statesmen and diplomats were to make a practice of telling the plain truth about their purposes and policies in plain words. This is precisely what General de Gaulle has done.

Open Secrets

Chairman May of the House Military Affairs Committee has announced the creation of a special subcommittee to investigate the intelligence and counterintelligence system of the Army. He says that for reasons of security most of the hearings probably will be conducted in secret sessions. But it strikes us that this precaution, and perhaps the investigation itself, will be superfluous. We have already observed a tendency on the part of those who have been connected with the intelligence services, or with any of the other organizations having to do with what used to be called secret service, to hurry into print with tales of how their particular pieces of plotting or counterplotting made possible the winning of the war. The one exception is the Federal Bureau of Investigation, whose individual members apparently are not permitted to capitalize their exploits.

As Representative May has implied, and, indeed, as General Marshall admitted to the Senate Military Affairs Committee, the armed forces are in considerable need of a central intelligence agency. We suggest that one reform might be to recruit the services of men who are somewhat less eager to tell the world about what they know and what they have been doing. This is one of several respects in which our intelligence service suffers by comparison with the British system or with the system of the papal secretariat, which are generally acknowledged to be the most efficient in the world. But whoever heard of a chief of Scotland Yard or a cardinal secretary of state writing sensational revelations for popular magazines?

Apart from the question of whether it is altogether in the interest of security to publicize our methods of gathering and exploiting intelligence, there is something rather unseemly about the great flood of hastily written memoirs and confessions that is apparently about to burst upon us. Some of these memoirs, no doubt, will have historical value, but the value would not be impaired by saving them for a few years. All great historical epochs, notably the French Revolution and the Napoleonic era, have given rise to an epidemic of memoirs, not all of them trustworthy. But, fortunately, most of them were published long after the deaths of their authors, when political tempers of revolution and the fanaticisms of war had disappeared.

Nation And State

The excellent work of numerous State governments and the Department of Justice in coordinating Federal-State activities during the war years and the months following has had too little public notice. It is true that their painstaking efforts to eliminate differences, to obtain the enactment of model State laws and to work out common problems around the council table have not been spectacular. But those efforts have laid the groundwork for a hopeful new approach to the reconciliation of national and local powers.

John W. Andrews, chief of the Justice Department's Federal-State relations section, tells the story of this venture in cooperation in the current issue of the Federal Bar Journal. A Federal-State conference on law enforcement problems and national defense was called in 1940. The result was the drafting of a number of model acts which were enacted in whole or in part in many of the States. In 1941 that technique was tried again with favorable results. After the war broke out efforts were intensified and many more Federal agencies were brought into the project. An Emergency War Powers Act was widely enacted in one form or another. Eleven States passed the measure permitting suspension of certain State laws in aid of the war; 39 States accepted the Federal Reserve Board's loan limitations. All the States established commissions on postwar reconstruction and development.

A threatened crisis over conflicting State regulations as to loads and sizes of trucks was averted by wide enactment of the ODT's so-called emergency formula, thus averting Federal legislation. More recently there has been a good response on model bills to aid returning veterans, to permit the purchase of surplus Federal property, and to preserve desirable standardized practices effected on an emergency basis in wartime.

Not less significant, Mr. Andrews says, is the change in the Federal-State relationship itself. A few years ago the meetings of Federal and State officials were characterized by both resentment and suspicion. Now a smooth working relationship through recognized machinery has supplanted stand-offishness and backstairs whispering. This is an achievement of no mean proportions. It has served the purpose of shifting the emphasis from States' rights to States' responsibilities, thus strengthening the Jeffersonian concept of government close to the people while eliminating many sources of annoyance and friction between Nation and State. We think Mr. Andrews is fully justified in referring to these experiments as "an excellent omen for the future."

Price Problem

In a public address, W. I. Myers, former head of the Farm Credit Administration, stated that "Government can guarantee prices but, of course, is powerless to make consumers buy more than they wish." Consequently, if large expenditures should be required to enable the Government to maintain farm prices at 90 per cent of parity during the two years following the formal termination of the war, Dr. Myers warned that "rigid production controls" are certain to result. Then he proceeded to drive home the fact that production control provides no solution for excessively low farm prices and income, as shown by our experience during the thirties. Financial benefits, so far as the farmer was concerned, were limited to Government checks for restricting output. "As size goes up, price may go down," he said; "as size goes down, price goes up. But the product of the two at any given price level is about the same."

This is a warning from an authoritative source that farmers should take to heart. They have little to gain and may lose a great deal by senseless efforts to boost food prices above already inflated artificial levels. Yet that is precisely what certain misguided farm bloc legislators are bent on doing. Two bills are now before the House and the Senate that attempt to raise the level of farm prices still higher by changes in the formulas for computing parity prices for farm products. This effort at price boosting is launched despite the fact that present support prices for some farm commodities, the production of which has been greatly increased to meet war demands, are, in the words of Dr. Myers, likely to result in greater production than can be sold at those prices. In other words, support prices are likely to prove much too high in relation to postwar demands.

The remedy for such a situation certainly does not lie in throwing an ill-adjusted price structure farther out of balance, and in the process making the country poorer by having to restrict agricultural output. In Dr. Myers' opinion—and it is based on sound economic reasoning and long experience—the situation calls for a tapering off and early abandonment of support prices with a view to adjusting production to peacetime levels.

Why Not The Council?

By Merlo Pusey

UNO and the Bomb

THE BIG THREE keepers of atomic know-how are being widely praised for their decision to drop the problem of future controls into the lap of the United Nations Organization. Nearly everyone wishes to see the UNO machinery used. A great many wish to have atomic power brought safely under international control. Messrs. Truman, Attlee and Mackenzie King aroused hope for achievement of both these aims by their declaration of last week.

Cheering as this outlook is, we must remember that the trustees of atomic power did not give us a specific formula for the international discussions which they propose. They agreed that "at the earliest practicable date a commission should be set up under the United Nations Organization to prepare recommendations for submission to the organization." Does this mean a Security Council commission, or a commission reporting to the General Assembly? Or does it mean a special commission on the same level as the Assembly and Council?

Some observers take it for granted that the White House conference specified a United Nations commission to circumvent the Security Council. If so, the question immediately arises as to whether the proposal is to use USO machinery, or to put it on the shelf.

THE UNITED NATIONS is no longer an amorphous idea. The organization agreed to at San Francisco assigns specific duties and powers to both the General Assembly and the Security Council. The General Assembly clearly has authority to set up "subsidiary organs" and to consider the general principles governing the regulation of armaments. If the proposed atomic commission should be set up under this grant of power, however, it would presumably report its recommendations to the assembly and the assembly would in turn have to report to the Security Council. That certainly would not conform to the Truman-Attlee-Mackenzie King demand for handling the problem with the "utmost dispatch."

There seems to be little doubt that ultimate decisions on the relation of atomic power to world security will have to be made by the Security Council. Under Article 24 of the charter, members of the UNO "confer on the Security Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and agree that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility the Security Council acts on their behalf." The council is also given the specific duties of formulating a system for the regulation of armaments and of investigating "any situation which might lead to internal friction." This certainly means the atomic bomb.

Having set up this special agency for the preservation of world security, we have little to gain and possibly much to lose by not using it when the biggest security question of our time arises. It is true that the Security Council may be bedevilled by the one-power veto. But this veto, which is available to each of the Big Five, does not operate in the case of procedural matters. To make any arrangement for internationalization of atomic power feasible, moreover, it must have the support of all of the Big Five.

THERE IS DANGER of making the same mistake in regard to UNO that the authors of the May-Johnson bill made with regard to our own Government. They proposed to relinquish control over atomic power into the hands of a Uinted States commission. That commission would have been subject to only flimsy checks by either the President or Congress. The basic fault of the bill was that it threatened to disrupt our orderly system of government in a frantic effort to solve a difficult problem in a hurry.

Possibly a special UNO commission could make more rapid progress than the Security Council in shaping plans to prevent the use of atomic energy for military purposes. But the rub comes, not in devising plans, but in the adoption and application of policies. Suppose, for example, that Russia should decline to be represented on a separate atomic commission. At one stroke that would leave the commission helpless to deal with the problem on a world scale. Moscow is already committed to participation in the Security Council. So if the United States, Britain and Canada should raise the question of safeguarding the use of atomic power in the council, no question of getting an appropriate body to examine the problem would arise.

There is always a great temptation to avoid the use of existing governmental machinery because the difficulties involved are readily apparent. But those difficulties are seldom overcome by farming out the chores of statesmanship. Official commissions may offer valuable advice, but they are also notorious for filling archives with forgotten recommendations. When the nations are setting up a Security Council for the special purpose of controlling weapons and preventing war, it wouldn't make sense to by-pass it with the first big problem arising within its jurisdiction.

The French Crisis

By Barnet Nover

De Gaulle And The Communists

THE UNEASY TRUCE that for a long time obtained between General De Gaulle and the French Communists has now degenerated into a state of open war with neither side inclined to give or seek quarter. In view of that development no solution of the present political crisis in France is likely to be anything more than tentative and temporary.

To be sure this is not the first time that De Gaulle and the Communists have been at loggerheads.

They were in a state of latent and sometimes of open conflict during the days of the Algiers regime. Before the recent elections, De Gaulle and the Communists, although agreed on the necessity of doing away with the constitution of 1875, took opposite sides on the question of the executive and legislative powers of the Constituent Assembly. When De Gaulle began to veer away from Russia and give a western orientation to France's foreign policy, Communist attacks on him began to increase in number and virulence.

UNTIL very recently, however, the De Gaulle-Communist truce managed to survive all these differences.

Thus, the Communists voted for De Gaulle as President of France. De Gaulle, in turn, was agreeable to the idea that the cabinet which he, as chief executive, was empowered to form should contain Communists as well as members of the Socialist and Popular Republican parties.

However, De Gaulle balked at giving the Communists any one of the three key places in the government, namely, the ministries of foreign affairs, war and interior. This from the viewpoint of the Communists, France's No. 1 party, was bad enough. What was worse was the reason given by De Gaulle for barring Communists from any of these posts.

In a conversation with Maurice Thorez, Secretary General of the French Communist Party, and later in a broadcast to the French people, De Gaulle made it clear that he was not prepared to trust the Communists with any post having to do with the formulation or execution of foreign policy.

In his broadcast De Gaulle said:

"As much as I was disposed to associate in a wide measure with the economic and social work of the government the men belonging to the party concerned (i. e. the Communists) and to accord them those ministries, just as much I did not believe it possible to confide to them many of the levers that command foreign policy: the diplomacy that expresses it, the army that sustains it and the police that protects it."

DE GAULLE thus admitted that he had no serious objections to the domestic policies of the French Communists, but suspected and was opposed to their foreign policy. He went on to explain:

"In acting otherwise in today's world situation, I would have risked not following, if only in appearance and in our tense universe appearances count, for much, the French policy of equilibrium between the two very great political powers which I believe absolutely necessary for the interests of the country and even for peace."

In other words, by giving the Communists any one of the three key positions in the cabinet he would, he admitted, place himself and his government in a position where France's foreign policy might be unable to reflect France's national interest but would directly or indirectly become the tool of Russia.

IN MAKING this statement, De Gaulle was being frank but impolitic. He was in effect, telling the Communists that while he did not object to their economic and social ideology he mistrusted their loyalty to France. Nor can it be said that given the record of such men as Maurice Thorez, he has no reasons for his suspicions.

Like weathervanes the French Communists have swung around every time the winds from Moscow have changed their course. They were violently opposed to the war when Russia was still operating under the Molotov-Ribbentrop pact. They became ardent patriots and, as a matter of fact, rendered yeoman service to the French resistance movement after Germany had attacked the Soviet Union. Like General De Gaulle himself they favored the Franco-Russian alliance. But like Moscow, they have strongly opposed the suggested western bloc.

THE COMMUNIST reaction to De Gaulle's attack upon them was, as might have been anticipated, prompt and vigorous.

They announced that they would not participate in any government formed by De Gaulle. They abstained from voting on the question of authorizing De Gaulle to make a new attempt to built a cabinet. They voted in the negative on the Socialist proposal (approved 400 to 163) that the three principal parties (Communists, Socialists, Popular Republicans) be given equal representation in the government.

Because of his immense prestige, De Gaulle possesses real advantages in his struggle with the Communists. But it would be a serious mistake to underestimate the strength of the Communists. Aside from the fact that they polled close to five million votes in the recent elections and control 142 seats in the Assembly, they dominate the six leading trade unions which means that by fomenting a general strike they can paralyze France.

Thus it cannot be taken for granted that in this developing struggle De Gaulle's victory is assured. The one thing we can be sure of is that, whatever temporary arrangement is made to ease the crisis the struggle between De Gaulle and the Communists is certain to continue.

Palestine

The suggestion of His Majesty's representative to create a new Anglo-American committee to investigate the Palestine problem all over again, while thousands of displaced European Jews are clamoring for admittance to Palestine, is another attempt at postponement and procrastination. What further information could become available through the efforts of this joint committee which has not already been accumulated during the past 25 years. This is merely another connivance on the part of the British government to postpone action and an attempt to "pass the buck" to the American Government.

Immediate authentic information pertaining to Palestine in all its ramifications is available to His Majesty's representative. Let him only ask sincerely and without feigning ignorance, and he shall be answered truthfully and forthwith. No need exists for the British government to spend one dollar more for additional committee work and investigations. After all, His Majesty's representative has crossed the Atlantic to seek, among other things, a loan of 4000 millions of dollars from the American government. Surely no part of this loan, if granted, is intended for such fruitless and superfluous expenditures as required by this investigational committee.

The time for action is now! Enough investigations! Palestine must be opened to immigration immediately! If Britain wants to prove her good faith to the world, let her show it thereby.

I am not a Jew, and I have always loved England and for what she stands. However, with reference to the Palestine question I cannot and never shall agree with her actions. How can she pretend to be Christian and at the same time deprive the Jews of their rightful heritage? When will England wake up and realize that when one forgets self (with regard to people or nations) then and then only can we hope to find world peace!

Christmas Sharing Clubs

American families have an unusual opportunity to teach their children the true meaning of Christmas this year by having them take part in a family project for foreign relief. While UNRRA will meet part of the minimum needs of hungry and cold peoples abroad, private agencies must fill in the gaps.

There could be no better way for a family to celebrate the Christmas season than by sending a cash donation, or a box of food or clothing, to some agency involved in foreign relief. Children respond quickly if told of their brothers and sisters across the sea needing food and clothing. The energy they showed in scrap paper drives can be diverted into collecting a family box to be set among the other gifts under the Christmas tree.

Now is the time for the conversion of "Christmas Savings Clubs" into "Christmas Sharing Clubs." We all know the terrific amount of suffering in Europe and Asia. Let us tell our children and work with them on a family relief project. If there is any one lesson which we must teach our children it is the fact that we are our brother's keeper.

The idea needs promotion now. American families will respond generously. I mentioned the idea to several couples the other day. Though they are in a low income group they said that they would be glad to give the five dollars they usually spend on gifts for each other to buy clothing for foreign relief. If we do not give generously, Christmas will be a mockery instead of a true celebration.

Inconsistent

The House of Representatives insists that UNRRA funds go only to countries having "free press" facilities. Yet here in Washington, in the press gallery of this same House of Representatives, no reporter is admitted if he happens to be a Negro.

Free press, yes indeed for Europe. Freedom from white exploitation—yes indeed—for Indonesians. If democracy works in the Balkans, maybe we should try it here sometime.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Homes For Veterans

THE WHITE HOUSE is being told in no uncertain terms that the problem of finding homes for veterans to live in is one that carries a dangerous charge of political dynamite.

One of those who talked to the President about it recently was Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago. Whatever else Mayor Kelly may be, he is a shrewd politician who can see trouble on the horizon when it is still a small cloud.

The figures on the number of married veterans who will want places to live far exceed the number of houses and apartments that will be available even by the most optimistic estimates. The deficit adds up to a question mark bound to loom larger as the months go by.

BY THE END of 1946, it is estimated, 2,900,000 married veterans will need homes. Of this total, 800,000 will be doubled up voluntarily with parents and relatives.

Another one million veteran families can be taken care of in existing housing. This is counting on the construction of 475,000 units during next year, which is probably an optimistic estimate. On this basis, 1,100,000 families would have no place to live.

Not long ago, National Housing Administrator John D. Blandford went up to Capitol Hill to suggest to Congress the need for a fund to move Government housing so that it would be available for veterans. He recommended appropriation of $24,500,000 for dismounting and shipping houses from areas where war industry has now receded to cities where the need is most acute.

A House Appropriations Subcommittee received him with scant courtesy. When he presented figures from out in the country to show how serious were the shortages, Chairman Clarence Cannon of Missouri accused him of whipping up a fictitious demand for new housing.

This week, some of the leaders in the National Association of Housing Officials are meeting in Washington. They were called together by Hugh R. Pomeroy, executive director, not to consider the problem of veterans, as such, but the whole picture of future home building in the next four or five critical years.

ONE OF THE most powerful of the lobbies that now infest the Capital is the real estate lobby. It is made up of two wings the National Association of Real Estate Boards and the National Association of Home Builders. They are fighting rent control on new house construction and price controls on new houses.

The real estate boards are opposed to all rent controls after June 30, when the OPA Act expires unless Congress takes action to renew it. They say that after that date controls should be left to local communities.

This substitute might work in some places. But, for the most part, it would be a frail reed to lean on in the face of (1) the serious shortage that will persist long after next June and (2) the unspent billions in bank accounts.

No statistical charts are necessary to show that a degree of inflation in the real estate field is already here. Everyone knows in his own neighborhood the example of the house that sold one month for so much and, the next month, for 10 or 20 per cent more.

As to the long-term public housing problem, there is hope in the fact that Senator Robert A. Taft, a Republican, has come together with Senators Robert Wagner and Allen J. Ellender, Democrats, on a bill which will soon be presented. Wagner and Ellender accepted certain improvements that Taft suggested.

Not long ago, Taft took part in a radio debate in which he argued the need for the Government to do part of the national housing job. He developed considerable heat in championing public housing to clear slums and give the lowest income groups a break.

Ever since then, the real estate lobby has looked on Taft with dark suspicion as a dangerous radical. That is a measure of the reactionary attitude of the lobby—that a Taft, a Republican Taft, could be mistaken for a radical. It is a measure, too, of the forces to be overcome if the housing job is to be done.

Housing Facts

The Post on November 11 published a statement by N. C. Hines, formerly executive director of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, now executive director of the recently organized National Real Estate Foundation, a private research agency whose findings are being offered to the Government as a basis for legislation. In this statement Mr. Hines accuses the National Housing Agency of denying priorities to private builders some two years ago and added, "Yet the National Capital Housing Authority was being assigned thousands of units."

Since Pearl Harbor NCHA has been assigned only 740 permanent dwellings. Meanwhile, private builders had more than 7000 in 1943 and were given 5225 late in 1943 and in 1944. In 1945 they were assigned additional dwellings. Except for its 740 permanent dwellings, NCHA has been restricted to temporary housing, which it accepted reluctantly and as a war measure, and which it wishes to remove as soon as proper permanent dwellings become available.

Inmates Tell Of Floggings, Wormy Bread

State Farm, Va., Nov. 19 (AP).—A number of State Farm inmates testi-field today to severe floggings, unclean conditions, inadequate medical care and sex perversion as a Board of Corrections subcommittee opened a hearing on charges of irregularities at the penal institution.

The first witness after a noon recess was George Worth Hatcher, jr., 20-year-old Richmonder, who entered into the chapel where the hearings was in progress with chains on his legs.

Hatcher said he had been in chains for more than four months for trying to escape, testifying that he had been forced to go to chapel services in chains. He said he was flogged on September 10 when he was given 25 lashes by Capt. Walter B. Gordon, assistant superintendent. He stated he received no medical attention after the whipping, although admitting at the same time he had not asked for medical aid.

Hung Up On Bar

The prisoner said he had been kept in a 7 by 7 jail cell with a number of other prisoners. He also testified he had been hung up on a bar for six hours because he took a drink of water while working without permission of his guard.

The first to be hear this morning as the investigation got under way was a 23-year-old inmate, Robert Johnson, from Newport News, serving a term for felonious wounding.

Johnson said he was flogged at the farm on September 20 by Capt. Walter B. Gordon, assistant superintendent, for refusing to work in a muddy corn field because he contended he had rheumatism. Johnson said that although he could not count the number of times he was flogged, he had been told by other inmates he was lashed 40 times by Captain Grodon.

The inmate was taken to a side room of the chapel where the hearing is taking place and his body examined, but only slight evidence remained of what appeared to have been marks of a flogging.

In answering the questioning of Howard H. Carwile, counsel retained by certain inmates at the prison and instigator of the proceedings, the oyuth said he was hung by his hands on a bar while at road camp No. 17 near Grafton.

Asked about food, Johnson said it is not clean and asserted that inmates with contagious diseases eat along with other prisoners and that they use the same utensils. "I have found worms in the bread here," Johnson said.

Slight Marks Found

Charles Doxey, 26, who has been here about five months, testified he was also flogged on September 20 and that the men were given no medical attention afterward. He said he has had nosebleeds since he was flogged, but that authorities have refused to do anything for him. Doxey asked State Senator A. E. S. Stephens and Albert Byran, comprising the subcommittee conducting the hearing, to take a look at the marks left by the flogging. However, examination showed only slight traces.

Asked about sex perversion, Doxey gave an alleged instance involving a 17-year-old boy and a 50-year-old man. He also backed up other inmates in testifying that syphilitics eat and bathe with other men. He also said the meat had smelled so bad at times he "would not give it to a dog."

Hits Medical Care

Aubrey (Dock) Simpson, 45, who has been here more than five years, said Superintendent R. L. Royster "always takes the attitude that prisoners are lying and that guards tell the rtuth." He said that Capt. Richard (Dick) Taylor is the only officer here who gives the men "a square deal."

Simpson told of instances in which he was given allegedly insufficient medical care and said that negligence on the part of State Farm medical men had caused him illnesses which still bother him.

Richard G. Poteet, 20, of Portsmouth, who has been here two years and a month, said he was one of the men flogged on the 20th and that he could feel blood run down his leg after the 35th lash was delivered. He also asserted he knew of instances of sex perversion among the inmates and that he had seen boys as young as 15 and older men having such relations. He also said he had been in chains in 1941.

Booker Held for Grand Jury In Slaying of Naval Officer

Leonardtown, Md., Nov. 19 (AP).—Denying a defense motion that the case be dismissed, Magistrate J. Abell today ordered George William Booker bound over to the March grand jury under $4000 bail on a charge of slaying a naval lieutenant at a party November 11.

Booker, 34, thin, sandy-haired, vending machine maintenance man, pleaded innocent to the killing of Lieut. Rodgers Edward Wilson, 28, at a hearing attended by 35 persons in the magistrate's small office at the courthouse.

Many others, including Booker's attractive wife, were in other parts of the St. Marys County Courthouse.

After the hearing, Booker was returned to jail but within an hour bond was posted and he was released.

Baer's Testimony

The chief witness for the prosecution was Lieut. Albert H. Baer, commander of a Patuxent River patrol boat, who said he witnessed the shooting at the climax of a party on the night of November 11.

Under cross-examination by Defense Counsel Paul J. Bailey, Baer told the court:

"It was my impression that he (Wilson) was annoying in some way Mrs. Booker."

He added, however, that he could not recall the exact words that passed between the men during an argument preceding the shooting.

Other State witnesses included Dr. F. F. Grenwell, county medical examiner, and State Trooper George F. Sanger, who told of going to the Booker home with Deputy Sheriff Jack Ozment and finding the body.

Ozment was the only witness called by the defense. He said he received a telephone call, apparently from Booker, telling him that a man had been shot in a cottage at the Seven Gables Hotel.

Victim Shot Twice

The deputy said that he and Sanger went to the cottage, located on the Patuxent River at California, Md., about 12 miles from Leonardtown.

Greenwell testified that he attended a post-mortem conducted by naval physicians and that death was caused by a shot that entered Wilson's left side, veered slightly upward and through the heart and left lung.

A second shot penetrated Wilson's left arm, where the bullet remained, Greenwell said.

Sanger, who filed the complaint, said Booker was using the telephone when he entered the cottage.

The trooper said Booker told him he ordered Wilson out of the house, but he refused to go, and that was why Booker shot him. Sanger said Booker would say no more about the case. Sanger said he found a .32-caliber automatic pistol on the bed.

Baer said that Wilson worked under him. He told of being invited to the Booker home for a drink "about 4:30 or 5 p. m."

At Least 8 Other Guests

He said he told his hosts that he had an engagement with Wilson, and that the latter arrived later. There were 8 or 10 others at the party, but none was identified at the hearing.

"It was not a wild party in any sense of the word," Baer said, adding: "There was stimulation, yes, but no drunks."

About 11:30 p. m., Baer said he went into the kitchen to get some food and heard angry talk in the living room. Returning, he said he saw Wilson seated by Mrs. Booker on a divan, with Booker confronting them and demanding that Wilson leave the house.

Baer said Wilson seemed to resent this, and that when it appeared there would be a fight after Wilson stood up, he grabbed him and "hustled" him to a rear door.

Mrs. Booker took her husband to the bedroom, Baer said, and then Wilson remembered he left his jacket on the divan and returned to get it.

The Bookers suddenly appeared in the bedroom doorway, and she was sobbing and appeared hysterical, the witness continued.

"Then Booker turned to Wilson and said something like 'Why are you coming back to my house'?" Baer said.

Threatening Motion

Wilson got mad again, doubled his fists and made one or two steps toward the Bookers, when suddenly a gun appeared in Booker's hand and several shots were fired, he testified.

"The only thing I could do was raise my hands over by head and shout 'No, no, no!'"

They were from 6 to 10 feet apart whe nthe shots were fired, and Mrs. Booker "threw her arms around her husband's neck, while he just stood there."

Then they went back to the bedroom, and Baer said he examined Wilson and saw he was either dead or badly wounded. He went to the hotel to notify the manager of the shooting.

Under cross-examination by Bailey, Baer was asked: "Wilson was in an ugly lisposition when he went back for that coat, wasn't he?"

Baer replied "Yes."

State's Attorney C. Henry Camalier asked that Booker be held for the firand jury. Baily then made his unsuccessful move to have the carse dismissed.

"A man's touse is his castle, and he has the right—even the duty—to shot," Bailey said.

Mrs. R. E. Booker, the defendant's mother, and his sister, Mrs. Martin Stepp, both of Louisville, Ky., were present.

Seaman's Son Holds Own in Life Battle

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 19 (AP).—Stricken by miliary tuberculosis—a rare disease that usually is fatal to children—Richard Temple, 19-months-old son of Richard Gordon Temple, a fireman third class serving aboard the U. S. S. Vulcan, now believed in Japanese waters, was reported in an unchanged condition at Petersburg Hospital today.

Dr. William M. McIlwaine, attending physician, said today that it was too soon to determine the effect of injections of the serum streptomycine—believed to be the only medicine which can save the life of the child. The serum was not administered until yesterday afternoon after final X-ray examination had disclosed Saturday that the child was suffering from the dread disease.

Robert has been ill two weeks, but it was not known until Saturday that he had miliary tuberculosis.

The serum was brought to Petersburg from McGuire General Hospital in Richmond.

Petersburg Chapter, Red Cross, is making an effort to have the father sent home from the Pacific to be with the child and his mother, and word was awaited today on the result of these efforts.

Larry McPhail's Trial Set Nov. 26

Bel Air, Md., Nov. 19 (AP).—Judge Frederick Lee Cobourn today set November 26 as the date for the trial of Larry McPhail, president of the New York Yankees baseball club, who has been indicted on two assault charges and one of disorderly conduct.

On October 8 McPhail was arrested on three warrants sworn out after a disturbance in the Bel Air telephone exchange October 5 over McPhail's inability to place a long-distance call during a four-hour work stoppage of telephone employes.

McPhail, who is out on $550 bond, and his attorney were not in court today, and whether he will reuest a jury or court trial will be settled when the case is called in Harford County Circuit Court.

The Yankee official has a showplace stock farm, Glenangus, near Bel Air.

Johns Hopkins Starts New Hospital Drive

Baltimore, Nov. 19 (AP).—The start of a campaign for three million dollars to finance construction and maintenance of a new surgical building was announced today by Johns Hopkins University.

Chairman John S. Gibbs, jr. of the board of trustees said the fund also would provide for erection of another building to house approximately 200 patients in the less expensive type of private and semi-private rooms.

Va. Educators Open 5-Day Parley Today

Richmond, Va., Nov 19 (AP).—Several hundred early arrivals, including directors, for the Virginia Elucation Association's annual week-long meetinfi the first big VEA convention since 1941, were in Richmond today. Two thousand of the State's teachers and school officials are expected to attend sessions which begin tomorrow.

The association's board of directors began their work this afternoon, and held another preliminary meeting tonight. On their agenda was selection of a new association secretary to replace Francis S. Chase, retiring executive secretary.

The executive board of the association's department of secondary principals and the department of superintendents also met tonight, at the Hotel John Marshall.

Fifteen other department and section meeting will be held at the hotel tomorrow morning, when the lirectors will also meet.

Delegates of distirets A, B, C, D, J, and L will hear Richard B. Kennon speak on "Our Unified Profession" at a dinner meeting tomorrow.

The first general session of the association tomorrow night will hear Watson Davis of Science Service, a news agency, disucss "Our Most Precious Resource," and Thomas C. Boushall, national education chairman of the United States Chamber of Commerce, on "Education Steps Up Living Standards."

Three Mars Planes Named for Islands In Pacific Area

Baltimore, Nov. 19 (AP).—Three of the four JRM-Mars 4½-ton flying boats being built for the Navy by the Glenn L. Martin Co. were named today, the firm said.

Sister ships of the Hawaii Mars, which was wrecked in the Chesapeake Bay last August, they will be christened Philippine Mars, Marianas Mars and Marshalls Mars.

Since all the ships are being named for Pacific Islands, the fourth will be either the Carolines Mars or Aleutians Mars, although there is a slight possibility of her being named the Hawaii Mars.

The Martin Co. originall had a contract with the Naval Air Transport Service for 20 of the two-million-dollar ships, but the number was cut down to 11 just before VJ-Day and later to five, including the Hawaii Mars.

Fairchild Plant Faces Strike Vote

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 19 (AP).—The United Automobile Workers, CIO Local 842, will hold a strike vote at the Fairchild Aircraft Division December 2, unless the union's demand for a new contract, including a 30 per cent wage increase, is met by that time, Joseph E. Craig, president of the local, said today.

Approximately 5000 employes of the company, builder of the C-82 packet plane, are involved in the dispute. Company officials declined to comment on the union's strike vote plans.

Auto Kills Md. Girl Near Union Bridge

Frederick, Md., Nov. 19 (Spl.).—Elizabeth Ann Naill, 16, one of 13 children of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ellsworth Naill, near Clemsonville, was instantly killed late last night when struck by an automobile as she was walking along the highway near Union Bridge in company with her brother, William.

Driver of the machine, Donald Bang, told State police that he was blinded by lights from an approaching automobile and did not see the girl and her brother.

Fire Razes Md. Barn

Frederick, Md., Nov. 19 (Spl.).—Volunteer firemen from Rockville and Gaithersburg saved other buildings on the Arnold Price farm, tenanted by James Krise, near Boyds yesterday when a large bank barn and contents burned. The barn was beyond saving when firemen arrived an dthey concentrated upon saving adjoining buildings. Price was unable to estimate immediately his loss.

Virginia Maps Law Aimed At Unsafe Boilers

Richmond, Va., Nov. 19 (AP). "The time has come" to "take measures which will largely prevent the use of unsafe boilers and pressure vessels in this State," the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council says in a report just handed to Governor Darden.

The report was accompanied by the draft of a proposed bill to provide a State boiler regulation and inspection system, swift passage of which was urged by the council.

According to the report, an incomplete survey showed there were at least 41 boiler explosions in Virginia during the past 12 years, with a toll of 31 killed, 53 injured, and property damage running into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The council asserted that part of the blame for these tragedies was because Virginia has become a "dumping ground" for boilers deemed unsafe by West Virginia and other States which have boiler codes. Lack of adequate safeguards to assure that boilers in Virginia are properly constructed, installed and maintained, was also blamed.

A letter from Charles Sattler, West Virginia's Commissioner of Labor, written in response to inquiries stated it was his opinion "and I believe a thorough check will confirm it, that in the past seven years at least 150 boilers, considered unsafe for operation and therefore condemned in this State, have been shipped into Virginia and placed in operation."

The council held that similar dumpings of unsafe boilers have come from North Carolina, Maryland and the District of Columbia which have boiler codes.

Area Hospital Heads to Meet

Baltimore, Nov. 19 (AP).—Hospital adjustments to peacetime operation will be the chief topic under discussion at the Maryland-District of Columbia Hospital Association's fifth annual meeting here November 29 and 30.

P. J. McMillin, president of the association and superintendent of the Baltimore City hospitals, will review the program of the new bureau of medical care in the Maryland Health Department. Winford H. Smith, M. D., director of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, will discuss the new licensing law in Maryland.

Other speakers will be John Hayes, president-elect of the American Hospital Association and director of Lenox Hill Hospital, N. Y., Dr. Robert White-Stevens, professor of agricultural research, Cornell University, and F. Hazen Dick, chief medical supply section, Office of Surplus Property Utilization.

Non-Veterans' Wearing Of Emblem Alleged

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 19 (AP).—American Legion Post Commander Samuel Cohen said today that "there are quite a few cases of non-veterans wearing the veterans' honorable discharge button in Hagerstown," adding that the legion planned to prefer charges against any nonveteran wearing the lapel pin.

3000 Midshipmen To Make 3200 Lbs. Of Turkey Vanish

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 19 (AP).—Thanksgiving dinner at the Naval Academy Thursday will include turkey with trimmings and cranberry sauce.

The dinner will follow brief Thanksgiving services in the academy chapel when Vice Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, academy superintendent, will read the presidential proclamation.

Thirty-two hundred pounds of turkey will be served to the 3000 Middies, who compose the brigade. The menu will also include, besides the scarce cranberries, olives, pickles, celery, sage dressing, giblets, mashed potatoes, young June green cauliflower, dinner rolls, apple pie and fruits.

The Middies will be permitted to smoke in the dining hall and cigarettes will be provided.

Recluse Found Dead With Sack of Money

Frederick, Md., Nov. 19 (spl.).—When found dead early today from natural causes in the kitchen of his home where he lived alone near Middletown, George Henry Stine had a small sack suspended from his neck containing old and current coins and bills worth $1323, Sheriff Horace Alexander reported.

Market value of the contents of the sack, made from ticking, may be considerably more than the face value, Alexander said. The sheriff has taken charge of the money pending legal distribution.

Christmas Seal Sale Starts in Maryland

Baltimore, Nov. 19 (AP).—The thirty-ninth annual Christmas Seal sale sponsored by the State Tuberculosis Association opened today in Maryland.

Philip S. Morgan, treasurer of the association, said all seals had been mailed and returns already were beginning to come in.

The sale will continue until Christmas.

Md. Legislative Council to Open 2-Day Hearings

Baltimore, Nov. 19 (AP).—The Legislative Council will meet tomorrow and Wednesday to consider proposals by a variety of boards and agencies, Dr. Horace Flack, council secretary, said today.

The extra day was added to the session to make up for one cancelled meeting which fell within the period of the recent special session of the General Assembly, Dr. Flack said.

The Tuesday program calls for appearance by representatives of the State Bureau of Mines, and the State Board of Electrical Contractors Association.

Wednesday, Dr. Flack said, would be devoted to hearings on the State Board of Funeral Directors and Embalmers and the Board of Osteopathic Examiners.

Col. Ray Sherman Rejoins Fishburne

Waynesboro, Va., Nov. 19 (Spl.).—Col. Ray G. Sherman, until recently assistant commander of the Ninety-second Infantry Division, has resumed his duties as professor of military science and tactics at Fishburne Military School.

Colonel Sherman was head of the ROTC unit at Fishburne from 1938-1942 and was reassigned to the position after his recent return from Italy. Col. Joseph L. Lancaster, at Fishburne during the war years, will remain at the school until further orders from the War Department.

Gen. Waller to Address Chamber in Front Royal

Front Royal, Va., Nov. 19.—Brig. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, adjutant general of Virginia, will address the local Chamber of Commerce tomorrow at 8 p. m.

General Waller, a former mayor of Front Royal, will speak on the subject of "The Reorganization of the Virginia National Guard."

6 Md. Troopers Return From Army Service

Baltimore, Nov. 19 (AP).—Six Maryland State Police who served in the armed forces have exchanged uniforms to return to their prewar jobs of law enforcement, Maj. Edward Mck. Johnson of the police said today.

Major Johnson said 61 troopers served in the various branches of the armed services and of these six had been reinstated, two are about to be discharged from the armed forces and two were killed in action.

Trooper Samuel F. Wilderson, who was serving as a first lieutenant with a bomber group when his plane was lost over Germany in 1943 and Trooper Sherwood R. Williams, who was in the infantry in Germany both were killed.

Among the returning policemen are Corpl. Charles Disney of the Benson Barracks, with the 502d Parachute Regiment; Donald M. Graham of the Waldorf Barracks, a motor transport officer of the infantry; William Cushen of the Conowingo Barracks, William Houck of the Frederick Barracks, Army Intelligence; Joseph McIsaac, of the Waterloo Barracks, and P. B. Rowland, at headquarters, who went overseas with the only horse cavalry unit.

Corpl. Charles McCoy, who will return next month, was a captain in the Army Air Corps in the China-Burma-India theater. Another returning veteran is William Miles.

Tire Plant Strike In Fourth Week

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 19 (AP).—A strike of 1925 employes of the Kelly Springfield tire plant here went into its fourth week today with no indications union members would relent in their demands for pay raises ranging up to 40 per cent.

President Ralph C. Beard of Local 26, CIO, United Rubber Workers of America, said after a membership meeting yesterday that the workers "clearly indicated their intention to continue the strike."

A company spokesman asserted that the union's demands would entail added wage costs of $2,000,000 and it "would be impossible" to meet that expense.

Biologist Explains Bay Oyster Deaths

Baltimore, Nov. 19 (AP).—James Z. Engle, acquatic biologist of the U. S. Interior Department, termed as "nonsense" today the current talk about an unspecified disease killing off Chesapeake Bay oysters.

"Some oysters have been killed by an over-abundance of fresh water in the upper bay," said Engle, who has spent the last two years in scientific study of the bivalves.

"But," he added, "it's nothing to get excited about because it happens often. No oysters are being taken from the beds where there have been deaths, so the public has nothing to fear."

First Wave of Joblessness Passing, Says Security Board

Reconversion unemployment has "passed its first crest" and leveled out — at least temporarily — the Social Security Board said yesterday, reporting fewer than 1,700,000 persons have filed claims for unemployment compensation during the past six weeks.

Since VJ-Day, the board said, about 3,400,000 individuals have filed such claims but more than 40 per cent of them had found jobs by the end of October and between 10 and 15 per cent of the others are dropping from the rolls each week.

"This means that nearly 50 per cent of persons going on the rolls are now being reemployed each month," the agency said.

At the time of Germany's defeat in May the number of unemployment insurance claims was around 165,000. It rose to 300,000 just before V-J Day and skyrocketed immediately afterward to nearly one million. Then it climbed gradually to around 1,700,000, where it has settled since October 1.

States with the greatest numbers of unemployed listed for compensation last week were New York, with 208,506; Michigan, 167,150; California, 179,359; Illinois, 135,889; Pennsylvania, 118,297; New Jersey, 129,287, and Ohio, 109,073. All other States had less than 54,000 each.

Meantime, Herman B. Byer, assistant of the employment and outlook branch of the Bureau of Labor Statistse, in a speech outlining prospects for 1946, declared, "the economic climate appears extremely favorable to continuous improvement in the employment situation throughout the next year."

The country approaches 1946, Byer poined out, with nonagricultural employment already stabilized, and at a level above that of 1940 by about four million workers.

Returning veterans will complicate the 1946 figures, but the total situation will be considered brighter than was generally forecast on VJ-Day, he said.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

German Research Aided U. S. Atomic Scientists

German atomic research helped Allied scientists to develop the atomic bomb, Alien Property Custodian James E. Markham said yesterday.

In a report to President Truman, Markham said German scientific publications prior to 1939 contained considerable information on atomic energy.

Some 3200 issues of enemy scientific periodicals were republished by the APC and distributed to American industrial concerns, scientific institutions, universities, research organizations and government agencies, Markham disclosed.

Markham said it would be impossible to calculate the aid the program gave to American science but, he pointed out, the agency had received many letters on the program.

For example, the editor of Chemical Abstracts, Dr. E. J. Crane, informed the APC: "There is not the least doubt in my mind of the fact that your republication program was one of the factors which made the atomic bomb possible."

Iowa State College, which received an Army-Navy "E" for atomic bomb research, reports: "The men working on this splitting of the atom used, to a considerable extent, the periodicals which you have reprinted."

The custodian's report explained that 94 per cent of the subscribers utilized the journals for war use. Subscribers included industrial concerns, scientific institutions, universities, research organizations and United States Government agencies.

When a telephone at The Post city desk rang shortly after noon yesterday, a timid feminine voice asked: "Can you tell me who won the Cadillac at the Variety Club dance last night?"

"Yes," a reporter replied, "Louise H. Evans, 939 Longfellow st. nw."

"Thank you," came the voice, "I'm Louise Evans of 939 Longfellow st. nw., and I wanted to be sure."

$150,000 Bequest Given W. & L. for Law Scholarships

Lexington, Va., Nov. 19 (AP).—A bequest of $150,000 to $200,000 to Washington and Lee University as residuary legatee under the will of the late Mrs. Martha S. Henkemeller of Wheeling, W. Va., was announced today by President Francis P. Gaines. Mrs. Menkemeller died recently.

Income from the bequest is to be used to establish the Charles Allison Menkemeller Memorial Scholarships in the school of law. The fund is a gift memorializing Mrs. Menkemeller's son, Charles Allison Menkemeller, who died in November 20, 1915, after obtaining his bachelor of law degree from Washington and Lee in 1915.

Conditions of the scholarships will be announced shortly, as soon as details are decided upon, Dr. Gaines said. He indicated income from the bequest would be available for scholarships by next fall.

FWA Grants Funds for Arlington Courthouse Addition

Federal funds to finance plans for an addition to Arlington County's courthouse were authorized yesterday by the Federal Works Agency, Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming announced.

FWA will advance $7000 to the Arlington Cuounty Board to pay the cost of carrying to contract-letting stage the courthouse addition project, estimated to cost $264,000.

The project, classified as "urgent" by county officials, would permit Arlington to supplement its present government quarters, characterized as "grossly inadequate." The present courthouse was built for a 25,000 population.

Funds will be made available to Arlington through the FWA Bureau of Community Facilities, and are to be repaid, without interest, when construction begins.

Other Virginia projects for which planning funds were authorized yesterday by FWA include a health center and six clinics for Richmond; rebuilding the water filtration plant at Suffolk and establishing a 450-million-gallon water storage dam at Lake Kilby; a 35-classroom elementary and occupational school for Negro children at Norfolk, and an 80-bed general hospital with accommodations for 20 nurses at Danville.

Food Handlers Of Arlington to Get 2d Lecture Course

A four-week course for Arlington County fod handlers, second in a series sponsored by the Arlington County Health Department, will open December 6, it was announced yesterday.

The series, to run through December, is designed to acquaint food handlers with health hazards, County Manager Frank C. Hanraham explained.

Norbert Melnick, chief Arlington sanitation officer, will preside at the four lectures December 6, 13, 20 and 27.

Lectures on food handling will be given by Dr. Ralph G. Beachley, county health officer and Dr. William A. Dorsey, chief of the bureau of laboratories.

School Cafeterians To Open in Greenbelt

Cafeterias will be opened at the Center and North End Elementary Schools in Greenbelt December 3.

The project will be financed by the Parent-Teacher Association and funds from the Production and Marketing Administration. Committee members are Mrs. Donald Romer, Mrs. Aton Bowman and Mrs. Sansone.

Green Seeks Supreme Court Ruling on Glass Senate Seat

The United States Supreme Court yesterday was brought into John Locke Green's one-man fight to unseat Carter Glass in the United States Senate.

Green, Arlington Republican and County Treasurer, stated he had filed a writ of certiorari with the United States Supreme Court, requesting that body to review the findings of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, which Green had previously petitioned. Green had asked the State court for a writ of mandamus against Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr., forcing him to declare Glass' seat vacant and to call an election to fill the vacancy.

In the action filed yesterday, Green asked for a review of the lower court's findings and again named Darden as defendant in the petition.

I nhis argument to the Supreme Court, Green contends that the question of a vacancy in one of Virginia's senatorial seats is a constitutional one. The Seventeenth Constitutional Amedment states, he said, that the Senate shall be composed of two Senators elected from each State, and that the Governor shall call an election when the State is without representation.

"Certainly," Green stated in his petition, "it cannot be said that the Commonwealth of Virginia has had full representation in the Senate of the United States for the past three and one-half years, or that it has such representation now, or that it will have such representation in the future under the present state of affairs.

Green pointed out that once a Senator is seated, he can be removed only for disorderly conduct by a two-thirds vote, according to the Constitution. "Under this same article," he continues, "the Senate is authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner, and under such penalties as it may provide."

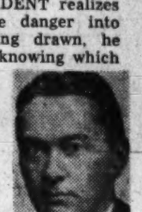
The Inner Working

IF THE PRESIDENT realizes how great is the danger into which he is being drawn, he shows no sign of knowing which way to turn in order to prevent it. The ship of state is adrift upon ever more perilous waters, and, being the captain, he will not avert a disaster by reiterating his good intentions or by complaining that the sea is rough, the storms are violent, the rocks are many and treacherous. The fact of the matter is that there is no navigator, there is no helmsman, and the captain is not setting the course.



LIPPMANN

For the trouble is at the White House in Washington, and only Mr. Truman can cure it. Whatever the United States can do about the Soviet Union, the continent of Europe, the conflict in China, the disorders of Southern Asia, it can do only if the government in Washington knows how to use the influence and power of the United States. Mr. Truman is not using the immense influence and power which was entrusted to him when he became President of the United States. He is dissipating and squandering that influence and is allowing that power to disintegrate.

IT IS NOT because he is lazy or indifferent. It is because he is caught in a daily routine of appointments, correspondence, telephone calls, which prevents any one of them from bringing an unhurried and fresh mind to bear upon the great questions. Down below in the departments there are men who manage to find some time to think. But at the top, while there is a good deal of fret and worry, there is really no time reserved for the full consideration of high policy. They are all much too busy with everything but the main things.

THE PRESIDENT alone can cure this inner trouble of his administration: this failure to think out the great decisions because individually the top men fritter away their best energies, and collectively they do not really take counsel together at all.

The President can cure it but only by a drastic alteration of his own habits of work. The foreign relations of the government cannot be conducted by any President—and certainly not by one who lacks background and experience—through spasmodic and hurried contact with his departmental chiefs separately and individually. The cure is obvious. It is to institute a regular daily meeting, lasting as long as may be necessary to finish its business, of the President and his four chief Cabinet officers concerned with foreign affairs, and to decide at that meeting, and nowhere else, all military, political, and economic questions of policy. That meeting should be held every morning until the present developing crisis has been mastered. It should have priority for the President, the Secretaries of State, Treasury, War, and Navy, over all other engagements. There is nothing that they have to do, no matter who telephones for an appointment, which compares in urgency and importance with their need to take their decisions together.

NOTHING LESS THAN this can begin to cure the trouble—no amount of separate conferences with this or that official, no amount of interdepartmental committees, or casual, spasmodic meetings of high officials. Nothing will do any real good except the habit of regular, prolonged daily meeting of these high officials collectively. But that will do good. They are able men; it would be hard to find available men who individually are more experienced or more qualified. But as the administration is now conducted, they are disorganized departmental heads and not statesmen, and their time and the President's time are, measured by their responsibilities, being wasted.

THIS IS THE kind of remedy that President Truman, like most of his recent predecessors, will find reasons, sufficient unto himself, for avoiding. It is inconvenient to change a regular schedule and to reform a habit of work. But in the art of government no other remedy is known when a state is in danger except for its leaders to sit in council until they have dealt with the danger and the danger emergency is over.

Later at least, if the degeneration of our affairs brings us to the crisis which is impending, Mr. Truman will wish he had adopted it sooner.

IF THIS SEEMS astonishing and unlikely, let some energetic reporter collate the facts on these two points: in the past ninety days how many hours out of each day has the President devoted to little fifteen-minute interviews and conferences with a vast assortment of people? How often and for how long has he conferred with his Cabinet, how often and for how long have Messrs. Byrnes, Vinson, Patterson, and Forrestal—the key men in foreign affairs—conferred with him collectively about our relations with Russia, Britain, China, Germany, and Japan?

The daily diaries of the President and his four principal lieutenants would show objectively and conclusively—I have no doubt whatever—that each is

Communication Answers Arab Office

Mr. Khairy, of the Arab office in Washington, takes issue in The Post of November 7 with an article by Mr. Sumner Welles published in The Post on October 31. Mr. Khairy contends that the Balfour Declaration and the Palestine Mandate are inconsistent with the establishment of a Jewish Commonwealth and adduces the Churchill White Paper of 1922 in support of his contention. It will be a sufficient answer to Mr. Khairy to quote from the report of the British Royal Commission on Palestine issued in July, 1927. After referring to the same excerpt from the Churchill White Paper which was mentioned by Mr. Khairy, the Royal Commission states:

> This definition of the national home has sometimes been taken to preclude the establishment of a Jewish state. But, though the phraseology was clearly intended to conciliate, as far as might be, Arab antagonism to the national home, there is nothing in it to prohibit the ultimate establishment of a Jewish state, and Mr. Churchill himself has told us in evidence that no such prohibition was intended.

This interpretation of the Balfour Declaration and the Mandate was also upheld by the Royal Commission on the basis of statements by Messrs. Lloyd George, General Smuts, and Winston Churchill. The commission's report states:

> Mr. Lloyd George, who was Prime Minister at the time, informed us in evidence that: "The idea was, and this was the interpretation put upon it at the time, that a Jewish state was not to be set up immediately by the Peace Treaty without reference to the wishes of the majority of the inhabitants. On the other hand, it was contemplated that when the time arrived for according representative institutions to Palestine, if the Jews had meanwhile responded to the opportunity afforded them by the idea of a national home and had become a definite majority of the inhabitants, then Palestine would thus become a Jewish Commonwealth.
> Thus His Majesty's government evidently realized that a Jewish state might in course of time be established, but it was not in position to say that this would happen, still less to bring it about of its own motion. The Zionist leaders, for their part, recognized that an ultimate Jewish state was not precluded by the terms of the declaration, and so it was understood elsewhere. "I am persuaded," said President Wilson on the third of March, 1919, "that the Allied nations, with the fullest concurrence of our own Government and people, are agreed that in Palestine shall be laid the foundations of a Jewish Commonwealth." General Smuts, who had been a member of the imperial war cabinet when the declaration was published, speaking at Johannesburg on the third of November, 1919, and Mr. Winston Churchill in 1920 spoke or wrote in terms that could only mean that they contemplated the eventual establishment of a Jewish state. Leading British newspapers were equally explicit in their comments on the declaration.

The "opportunity" of which Mr. Lloyd George spoke was never afforded to the Jews, since restrictive measures were introduced almost immediately interfering with Jewish immigration and settlement in Palestine. These restrictions continually increased in severity, culminating in the White Paper of 1939. Mr. Khairy finds support to his interpretation of the Mandate in the White Paper, but this support is hardly authoritative since the Mandate's Commission of the League of Nations expressly stated that the White Paper was inconsistent with the Mandate. Therefore, the White Paper must be rejected as an unlawful document without any bearing on the legal situation.

Financial State Of All Called Best in History

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—The war was well financed and "our banking institutions, business in general and individuals are in a healthier financial condition than ever before," Daniel W. Bell, Undersecretary of the Treasury, declared tonight.

Bell told the annual dinner meeting of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms that from July, 1940, to July, 1945, the Federal Government spent 323 billion dollars, of which 290 billion dollars was for national defense.

Tax receipts were 133 billion dollars, leaving a deficit of 190 billion dollars, Bell reported, and nonbank investors returned 121 billion dollars of it to the Treasury in Federal securities.

Some Hot Money

Bell declared that of 68 billion dollars of savings which went into money forms, some part "is definitely hot money," in the inflationary sense, but "the largest part of the funds placed in cash forms represents legitimate savings."

"In absorbing 121 billion dollars out of 190 billion dollars of new funds," the Undersecretary said, "we came pretty close to shooting par. On the other hand, no one in the Treasury would argue that the job has been perfect. Moreover, we well realize that even Govrnment securities are not completely foolproof in preventing inflation, since bonds can be redeemed or they can be sold in the market."

The Treasury has tailored securities to the needs of the investor, Bell said.

Funds to Expand Plants

"Corporations have readily available funds to use for plant expansion as well as for reconversion purposes," Bell said. "Individuals are in a position to draw on their bonds to aid them in periods of unemployment and to assist them in purchasing new supplies of consumers' goods as they become available.

"Our public debt will soon be more than 270 billion dollars, and it is clear that the annual interest charge in the next few years is going to run in excess of five billion dollars. The average rate of interest on the debt today is 1.94 per cent, and our net borrowing during the war has bene done at an average rate of around 1.8 per cent. Constrast this with World War I, when the average interest rate was about 4¼ per cent.

"I hope that conditions will be so good in the next several years that we will have a surplus in the Treasury and will be able to retire debt continuously."

Truman's Health Program Summarized

The White House yesterday gave out this official summary of President Truman's National Health program:

Yesterday the President sent to the Congress a special message proposing a five-point national health program.

The President points out that millions of our citizens do not have a full opportunity to achieve or enjoy good health; millions do not have protection against the economic effects of sickness. Even prewar, there were 31 counties in the United States each with more than 1000 inhabitants in which there were no practicing physicians. About 1200 counties, with some 15 million inhabitants have either no local hospital or none that meets even the minimum standards of national professional assoiations.

Selective Service had to reject five million young men, or one-third of those examined. An additional three million had to be discharged or rehabilitated.

In his message, the President reviews the main problems and needs, and he submits a five-point program for legislative action.

RECOMMENDATION 1. Construction of hospitals and related facilities. Federal aid should be provided for construction of hospitals, health centers and other facilities wheer they are needed. These are essential if doctors are to be able to furnish modern services.

RECOMMENDATION 2. Expansion of public health, maternal and child health services. The existing cooperative health programs between the Federal and State governments should be expanded with the help of increased Federal funds. All parts of the country and, all groups in the population should be able to benefit from them. Expansion is especially important to prevent disease and to provide services for mothers and children. Approximately 40 million persons in the United States live in communities which still lack full-time public health services.

RECOMMENDATION 3. Medical education and research. We cannot remain satisfied with what we already know about health or disease. The opportunities for further health progress are very large. Research pays large dividends. Professional education should keep pace with progress. Federal grants in aid should assist and encourage research, so that we shall learn more about how to prevent and cure disease. Federal aid should also support more adequate professional education. Special emphasis should be paid to research on the cause, prevention and cure of cancer and mental illnesses.

RECOMMENDATION 4. Prepayment of medical costs. Everyone should have ready access to all necessary medical, hospital and related services. The costs of essential medical services should not stand in the way of the patient who needs care.

A compulsory national health insurance system is proposed toward attaining this goal. It would be a system for prepayment of the costs through premiums which people could afford, and which are paid while they are well and working.

This is not socialized medicine.

Prepayment would relieve families of worry about medical costs and would encourage them to receive care as soon as it is needed. Thus, it would also work toward preventing serious disease.

Patients would remain free to choose their doctors. Doctors would remain free to accept or reject patients. Hospitals would continue to manage their own services. Voluntary organizations could participate in the insurance system, either to provide services and if paid therefor, or to assist in administration, depending on their functions.

Decentralized administration would provide for needed local adjustments in fees, methods of payment and arrangements for services.

Doctors and hospitals could expect improvement and stability of income, at the same time that patients are relieved of unexpected and burdensome costs.

RECOMMENDATIONS. Protection against loss of wages from sickness and disability. Disability insurance would protect America's families by guaranteeing some income when they are sick or permanently disabled.

The President urged the Congress to consider such health legislation now. This five-point program would strengthen the Nation to meet future problems. It would contribute greatly to freedom from want.

Ashburn Woman Hurt As Auto Skids Off Road

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 19 (Spl.).—Mrs. Jeanette Cooksey, wife of Harry S. Cooksey, of Ashburn, was admitted to the Loudoun County Hospital today suffering with injuries received when her car skidded on the slippery road and struck a tree. Mrs. Cooksey sustained a fractured leg and undetermined head injuries. The accident occurred about noon on the road leading from Ashburn to Route No. 7.

'Miraculous' Escape

Lewiston, Mont.—The most miraculous escape from death was recorded for this area recently when a car containing seven youths skidded sideways 144 feet, fell over an embankment, turned over five times, completely demolishing the vehicle. None was killed.

Culpeper Rites Held For Mrs. Mary Willis

Culpeper, Va., Nov. 19 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held this afternoon from her residence for Mrs. Mary Martin Willis, 45, wife of Edgar O. Willis, jr., who died on Saturday in University of Virginia Hospital.

She was the daughter of Mrs. Arthur Lewis Martin of Bowling Green and the late Dr. Martin and is survived by her husband and two children, Edgar O. Willis 3d and Sarah Brockenbrough Willis of Culpeper; also a sister, Mrs. W. H. Ransome of Jackson, Miss. She was a member of the Culpeper Garden Club, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and the Culpeper Minute Men Chapter, DAR.

Students are instructed in making cotton swabs with which to clean baby's ears, holding the baby properly to give support to the back and in many other things necessary in the proper care of a child.

Rayon Scarcity Is Bottleneck In Men's Suits

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—With retail stocks at the lowest point since the war began, clothing manufacturers today held out a little hope for improved supplies of suits and coats for men, but cautioned that production hinges on getting more rayon for linings.

An industry spokesman said men's clothing makers are getting only 30 to 40 per cent of the normal supply of lining fabrics, while demand is at least one third above normal.

Estimates of current production of men's clothing range from 700,000 to slightly over a million suits a month, while monthly demand for veterans alone is said to be about two million.

More Production Ahead

"Clothing is starting to come through now in increasing quantities," said Jerome I. Udell, president of Max Udell Sons & Co., clothing maufacturers. "Production was about 50 per cent of normal before VJ-Day and currently has risen to about 75 per cent. If there is relief in rayon linings, by January production may approach normal."

The Civilian Production Administration has taken steps to correct the unequal distribution of lining materials by giving men's and boys' clothing priorities, he said. But other problems to be met are gray goods pricing difficulties, diversion of rayon yarn to tire cord and strikes in some finishing plants.

"Retailers' stocks can't go much lower than they are now," Udell said. "But with gradual improvement in production a veteran will be able to get a suit. He won't have much to choose from, but with a little shopping he will be able to find one in his size."

But while his chance for getting a suit—and even a coat—may improve, the veteran probably will have more trouble than ever in buying a shirt.

"Bad as it is today, the shirt supply situation will get worse if we don't get textiles," said M. J. Lovell of the Shirt and Pajama Manufacturers Association. "Unless something happens I don't think he will have anywhere near what we will need into 1946."

Lovell added that oneo possibility for improvement is that "the passing of the old tax period December 31 might bring out a bigger flow of goods that may have been held up for tax purposes."

Mount Rainier To Get Better Trolley Service

Mount Rainier will get one and a half minute troyyel service in rush hours, Riverdale four and a half minute service and Branchville six minute service under the new transit plan.

The proposal, drawn up by the Independent Trade Association and the Capital Transit Ca., will be submitted at a Public Service Commission public hearing next Tuesday at Baltimore.

Capital Transit officials said yesterday Greenbelt will bet 20 minute bus service all day, instead of the present 30 minute off peak service. The bus will operate from the Branchville trolley line and will loop around the north end section of the town. Two busses will be used in suplying this service.

Cheverly people, according to a study of the destination of passengers, will find the new plan giving more direct service, the officials said. At the same time it was acknowledged that passengers heading for the Navy Yard will find the new plan delaying them.

Questioned about the speed of trolley service on the Rhode Island ave. line from Mount Rainier, transit officials said the cars are now crowded under a "wartime standard of loading," but this will be discontinued when sufficient manpower and equipment becomes available.

The "high speed" trolleys will be used as far as Branchville if the new plan is approved and "turn arounds" will be built at Riverdale and Branchville with shelters erected at both spots. The old type cars, now used, do not require the "turn arounds" as do the newer one-man cars.

Va. State Law Bars Alexandria Autum Voting, Clarke Say

Alexandria city council efforts to have the June city elections combined with the general elections in November have met a State law barrier, it was revealed yesterday by State Senator Andrew W. Clarke.

Clarke said the Section 122 of the Virginia constitution makes it mandatory for Virginia cities to have elections in June and that the General Assembly does not have the power to amend the law. Only a constitutional convention could bring about the change and it is doubtful if there is enough pressure for such a convention, he pointed out.

Delegate Wilson Selden Washington of Alexandria, who also referred to the constitutional requirement, said he favors a change.

Why Shouldn't America Have Through Sleeping Car Service from Coast to Coast?

Chesapeake & Ohio and the Nickel Plate stand ready to join with other railroads to start this service without delay!

OUR American railroad system, for all its fine accomplishments, is woefully inadequate in one important respect.

The traveler cannot go from one of our coasts to the other by through sleeping car service. He must break his trip — at Chicago, St. Louis, Memphis, or New Orleans.

Even if he rides the crack trains, he must still change at these points—often with a wait of several hours in between.

He must put up with the inconvenience of packing and transferring his baggage, often going from one station to another, waiting around for connections, boarding another train.

He has at least two sleeping car reservations to worry about — when one should suffice.

He is put to far too much trouble — and far too much waste of time.

Invisible Line Divides America

Why should travelers have to put up with this? Why should there be a dividing line beyond which you cannot pass without changing trains?

Isn't it high time the travelers of this country enjoyed the benefits of through sleeping car service all the way from coast to coast?

And why shouldn't they get it? Is it because of the physical problem that would be involved in transferring sleeping cars from one road to another? Is it because schedules would have to be readjusted to maintain convenient departure and arrival times?

Surely, such problems can be worked out — and should be worked out — in the interest of the traveling public.

Who Will Take Action?

The Chesapeake & Ohio and the Nickel Plate Road are not the only railroads that, in conjunction with others, could provide this service. But no railroad has yet provided it. And we of the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Nickel Plate are willing to make a start.

In fact, we are so convinced that action should be taken, and taken without more delay, that we go on record as follows:

A Concrete Proposal

Chesapeake & Ohio, whose western passenger terminus is Cincinnati, stands ready now to join with any combination of other railroads to set up through sleeping car service from coast to coast on practical schedules and routes.

The Nickel Plate Road, which runs to Chicago and St. Louis, also stands ready now to join with any combination of roads to set up the same kind of through transcontinental sleeping car service.

Through sleeping car service is bound to come. Because it is so much in the public's interest, it is also in the interest of all railroad people and all railroad investors. We invite their support — and the support of all who travel — for this badly needed improvement in rail transportation.

cooperative and harmonious" was missing. All three groups left separately. It was learned, however, that the union group and the labor conciliators held an unannounced all-afternoon session at the Labor Department.

Several reasons were advanced by various members of the negotiating committee for holding the meeting tonight instead of 24 hours later, the hour of the official ending of the truce. Among them are: (1) to give the negotiators another day of truce in which to continue their talks, (2) because a wrestling match is scheduled for the arena Wednesday night and no other suitable hall was available, and (3) it was felt that Thanksgiving Eve was not satisfactory for a large turnout of union members.

The union is demanding an increase from $1.02 an hour to $1.25. The $1.02 scale was awarded the union by an arbitration committee ruling early in October, which the company accepted, but the union rejected as insufficient. Previously, the union had been receiving 95 cents an hour plus a wartime bonus of 7 cents. The arbitration award made the additional 7 cents an hour part of the basic wage structure.

Restaurant Man Indicted For Murder

The grand jury yesterday returned a second degree murder indictment against Millis M. Edmonds, 39, White Towers Restaurant manager accused of fatally stabbing Chief Petty Officer William D. Brook, jr., in an early-morning fracas at the lunch room, 3020 14th st. nw.

Brock, a combat veteran, and three other persons entered the restaurant, October 21 to order some food, and the altercation occurred after an argument over the service, police said.

The true bill was one of 29 returned before District Court Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws.

Three husbands were indicted on nonsupport charges following an announcement by District Attorney Edward M. Curran that all such cases are to be prosecuted vigorously here.

Those named were James N. Bennett, jr., 48, 709 D st. nw., a freight conductor, on charges of failing to support his wife, Beulah of 613 K st. sw.; Lonnie E. Haywood, sr., 34, for nonsupport of his wife, Gracie, 607 3d st. nw., and their 11-year-old girl; and Marvin D. Allen, sr., 32, of Baltimore, for nonsupport of his two minor children. His wife, Frances, is employed as a Capital Transit operator but claims she is unable to support the children on her wages.

The penalty for nonsupport is one year in jail, $500 fine or both.

If Eberharter chooses, he can forfeit the $25 collateral and that would end the case.

Police records show two previous traffic charges against the Pennsylvania Congressman. On December 5, 1942, he was accused of disobeying an official traffic sign, and on May 19, 1945, he was charged with parking in space reserved for a hack stand. nI both cases Eberharter was "warned."

At yesterday's session in the corporation counsel's office, Pvt. Bridges presumably told the events which led to today's charges.

Attempted Illegal Turn

In his official report, Bridges had said that the congressional car, bearing Pennsylvania license plates numbered HG-422, which were issued to Eberharter, was going east on H st. and attempted to make an illegal turn into 14th st. against a red light.

Bridges said that when he went to the side of the car to question the driver about the traffic violation, the driver suddenly drove off. Bridges said that he clung to the side of the car and was dragged along for a distance of 30 feet.

Bridges suffered bruises and his uniform was torn. He was treated at the police clinic yesterday and will remain on sick leave pending the result of another check at the clinic Friday.

Reporters searched high and low for Eberharter without success yesterday both in his office in the House Office Building and on the floor of the House.

Reporters Shooed Away

His secretary, Miss Evelyn Carson, declared she did not know his whereabouts and finally asked Capitol Police to keep reporters from the office.

At the Congressman's home, at 706 N. Tazewell st., Arlington, Va., a woman who identified herself as Mrs. Eberharter, said she had seen newspaper accounts of the incident.

She was asked if Eberharter or any member of the family had been driving the car at the time. Her answer was a flat "no."

She was asked if she knew who had been driving the car.

"I'd rather my husband would speak," she said.

Reuther Hails Price Plan

Walter Reuther, vice president of the CIO union, hailed the announcement that the GM cars will be 2.5 per cent lower as support of the union's contention that the corporation could raise wages without increasing prices.

First Studebaker available for sale will be the Deluxe Champion sedan, whose drive-away price will be about $1058. Lee D. Butler, Studebaker dealer at 1121 21st st. nw., said no accurate comparison could be made between the price of the 1946 model and the 1942 model.

Although the 1946 price is about 12 per cent higher than the 1942 price, the increase is due in part to the fact thta the new car embodies many mechanical changes omitted from the 1942 car, which followed closely in design the 1941 model, Butler said.

GM Prices Also Higher

The inclusion of the specification changes, in addition to the other prcie-raising factors, have resulted in the 1946 price, Butler added.

While the list price of General Motors cars has been reduced by 2.5 per cent, the actual dollar outlay will be about $115 higher for the 1946 Pontiac and Buick sedans, GM officials said.

Here again, the price rise is attributable to higher taxes, freight charges and handling charges, it was said.

the health insurance system full time, part time, or not at all.

Hospitals, he said, would have the same freedom of action.

Senator Taft, in taking issue with President Truman, said:

"While the President argues that his plan is not socialized medicine, it is in fact impossible to impose a tax-supported compulsory health insurance program without socializing the medical profession."

Favors Broad Coverage

President Truman told Congress that he favored the broadcast possible coverage for the national health insurance system.

"I believe," he said, "that all persons who work for a living and their dependents should be covered under such an insurance plan. This would include wage and salary earners, those in business for themselves, professional persons, farmer, agricultural labor, domestic employes, Government employes and employes of nonprofit institutions and their families."

In addition, the President said, needy persons and other groups should be covered through premiums paid for them by public agencies. Congress, he said, should vote appropriations to reimburse the States for such premiums as well for expenditures made by the States in paying for medical services provided by doctors and hospitals to needy persons.

Offers 4 Other Points

The health-insurance plan was part of a five-point program which President Truman sent to Congress for "careful consideration now." The other points were:

1. Federal financial aid to States and localities for enlarging, modernizing and building new hospitals and other health facilities.

2. More generous grants to the States for public health services and maternal and child care. At present 20 million dollars yearly is authorized for such purposes.

3. Federal grants to public and to nonprofit private institutions to promote medical education and research.

4. Payment of benefits, "to replace at least part of the earnings that are lost during the period of sickness and long-term disability."

N.Y. Police Use Mobile Units To Stem Crime

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Police dispatched 19 "rolling arsenals" to patrol city streets today as one killing, one holdup and another attempted holdup underscored a mounting eruption of crime.

The wave of violence has cost the lives of 62 persons in 70 days.

The "traveling arsenals," equipped with tear gas grenades, rifles, machineguns and powerful searchlights, were assigned to 24-hour-a-day patrol duty. They were manned by three detectives and a driver.

Even as an undermanned police force put the new measure into effect a man died of bullet wounds in Harlem Hospital, four bandits armed with a machinegun attempted an $18,000 holdup and four others escaped with $1250 from a Bronx tavern.

Police Commissioner Arthur Wallander ordered the extra patrol yesterday after the City Taxpayers Union demanded 5000 war veterans be appointed special deputy sheriffs to quell what it termed "the present crime wave prevalent in our city."

The police department has 4017 unfilled vacancies—in addition to men still in the armed forces and on leave.

Officials said an increase in criminal activity in the 20-year-old and 'teen age groups was one cause of the crime wave. Of 214 murders last year, they said, 22 were committed by children under 16, and 29 by persons in the 16-to-20-year-old group.

remaining was whether the weekly pay increase should be the full $6 demanded by the union "or whether the weekly increase should be the amount called for in the decision by the National Telephone Commission" of the WLB. The Telephone Commission recommended a $4 wage boost.

All suburban and down-State and long-distance telephone service to and from Chicago was halted by the strike. Telephone service within Chicago's city limits was not immediately affected, however. The 6000 Chicago operators are not members of the striking union.

A five-hour Nation-wide "demonstration of strength" walkout of telephone workers was staged early in October.

Hill by keeping alive agitation for a square deal on this issue."

Senes B. Passmore, president of Petworth Citizens Association, said: "Poll results show that sentiment favoring local suffrage is still as strong as it was in 1937 when we took our referendum. The Post poll can easily be incorporated into our program. It will round out the platform very effectively."

George C. Cortland, speaking for the Georgetown Citizens Association, told the Post that there were many local questions which his group would like the Post Poll to tackle. "Besides the national representation issue, which we favor, we would like to have some indication of what Washingtonians think about schools and housing improvements," Cortland said.

Board of Education members yesterday asked the Post Poll to consider school problems when they select questions for future polling.

Mrs. Marian Wade Doyle, president of the Board of Education, said, "Since schools so definitely belong to the people, any expression of the people on educational matters should be helpful to the board. I believe in suffrage for the District, and I think the poll should be helpful in that end."

Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, expressed hope that polls on education problems would be noticed by parents whose interest in their childrens' education is "lukewarm."

Mrs. Watkins questioned the significance of the first question handled by The Post Poll. "We can't get enough people to attend congressional committee hearings for better education. How can we be sure people would vote if they had the right?"

George W. C. Hayes, Negro member of the Board of Education, said he opposed publishing opinions by race unless the issue "might be inherently on eof color." Otherwise, he stated, the poll might hinder rather than help the solution of problems.

D. C. Insurance Sales Up 24% During Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington sales of ordinary life insurance in October totaled $7,754,000, a gain of 24 per cent over the same month last year.

Reporting this yesterday, the Sales Research Bureau of Hartford added that insurance sales here for the first 10 months aggregated $67,844,000 for an increase of 14 per cent over the like 1944 period.

Nearby States also showed substantial gains. Maryland insurance sales for the month were $13,573,000, up 24 per cent, and for the first 10 months totaled $123,597,000 for a gain of 13 per cent. Virginia's sales in October increased 13 per cent to $14,664,000 and for the 10 months showed a gain of 14 per cent at $125,812,000.

Nationally, sales of ordinary policies aggregated $856,736,000 in October for an 18 per cent upturn and for the first 10 months totaled $7,885,978,000 for a jump of 12 per cent.

Meanwhile, the Institute of Life Insurance reported yesterday that insurance death claims in the District of Columbia for the first nine months this year totaled 10,657 for $8,224,000. Of this aggregate, 1752 ordinary policies paid $5,116,000; 1864 group policies paid $1,566,000 and 7041 industrial policies paid $1,542,000.

Baltz to Serve 17th Term

Edward C. Baltz was re-elected secretary of the Perpetual Building Association for the seventeenth successive term at the annual meeting of shareholders last night. A former president of the United States Savings and Loan League, Mr. Baltz has been with the institution for more than 35 years.

His report to shareholders revealed that resources of the 64-year-old home financing organization are in excess of $73,000,000, an all time record.

All officers and directors were also re-elected. Arthur G. Bishop continues as chairman of the board; Marvin A. Custis, president; Samuel Scrivener, sr., and Thornton W. Owen, vice presidents; Mr. Baltz, secretary, William H. Dyer, treasurer and assistant secretary, W. H. Rippard, auditor.

O'Brien Rejoins Folger Firm

Maj. Robert Lee O'brien, jr., has returned from military service abroad and rejoining the investment banking firm of Folger, Nolan & Co., American Security Building. Major O'Brien is a native of Washington, being the son of the late Robert Lee O'Brien.

Prior to joining Folger, Nolan & Co. in February, 1937, he was associated with the investment department of the National Savings & Trust Co., and later with A. S. Pratt & Sons.

Golden Rule in Business

Application of the Golden Rule to business activities would remove from the minds of employes four primary "fears," declared Harry Coopland of St. Louis in an address here last night before the Washington Association of Credit Men at the Lee-Sheraton Hotel.

Advocating that management "become leaders rather than bosses," he suggested that management alleviate their employes' fears in the following manner:

1—Fear of poverty, through a livable wage;

2—Fear of sickness, through clinic service;

3—Fear of death, through insurance benefits;

4—Fear of injustice, through management by leaders.

American Co. Dividend

Directors of the American Co., Washington real estate firm, have declared a regular dividend of $2.50 a share on preferred stock, payable December 6 to stockholders of record November 30.

Mahan Elevated by Crosley

Sydney D. Mahan, former director of advertising and promotion for the Treasury Department's War Bond program, has been named vice president of the Crosley manufacturing division.

Mahan is well known in Washington for his two and a half years as associate national field director in charge of all War Bond and Stamp sales through retailers and newspaper boys.

Cabell Again Heads ASEF

Wymond Cabell, senior partner of Branch, Cabell & Co., Richmond, yesterday was reelected president of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms for his second term. He is also a member of the board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange.

The association broadened its own board of governors to 33 members from 30 and elected M. A. Willen, New Orleans, James E. Hogle of Salt Lake City and F. E. Bossom of Hartford, as the new members.

Richard P. Dunn of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, Washington, was reelected as governor for a three-year term.

SEC Revokes Licenses Of 2 Western Brokers

Philadelphia, Nov. 19 (AP).—The Securities and Exchange Commission revoked today the broker-dealer registration of Kressly & Campbell, Seattle, Wash., and Paul W. Judd, Tacoma, Wash., for violations of the Securities Act and the Securities Exchange Act.

The commission said it had found that from February, 1940, through June, 1941, the two firms sold shares of International Metals Development, Inc., which were not registered as required by the Securities Act.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

GAO Prepares to Close 4 Army Audit Branches

DIARY NOTES: General Accounting Office plans to close its four Army audit branches and to centralize the work in St. Louis. The branch offices are in New York, Chicago, Atlanta, and Los Angeles. They will be liquidated within a year. About 3500 people are employed in them to audit war contracts. The work is tapering off and the St. Louis office will have about 1200 employes . . . The Wagner-Ellender housing bill would bring employes of the Federal Housing Administration under Civil Service and the Classification Act . . . Seabees are to be kept as a permanent unit of the Navy Department . . . The Navy will take no action on demands of its per diem employes for a 30 per cent increase in basic salaries until after private shipyards raise salaries of their employes.

KLUTTZ

LABOR: Assistant Labor Secretary Daniel W. Tracy has withdrawn his resignation which was to have become effective on December 1 and today he will take over the administrative affairs of the department, succeeding Edward C. Moran who resigned. Labor Secretary Schwellenbach persuaded Tracy to stay and he has given him broad authority to complete the reorganization of his department. Louis Sherman of the solicitor's office, will be appointed an assistant to Tracy. John W. Gibson, special assistant to the Secretary and a CIO member, is to be the new Second Assistant Secretary. Tracy is an AFL member.

PLANS: Tracy, who as sidetrackedduring Moran's stay in Labor, has ben working for months on a reorganization plan of the department. He was the principal adviser to former Secretary Frences Perkins on streamlining and he was Miss Perkins' first choice to be her successor. Now he has his chance o carry through his ideas and he will pick up where Moran left off. Tracy will lean heavily on the advice of veteran department employes in fitting units of the War Manpower Commission and War Labor Board into the department. It's highly probable that Tracy will go back to Miss Perkins' views on building up the department which include, among other things, the transfer to it of the National Labor Relations Board and the Unemployment Compensation Bureau of the Social Security Board.

SURPLUS: War Assets Board, the new Reconstruction Finance subsidiary which will sell 90 per cent of the Government's surplus war goods, has elected these officers: Arthur J. Fushman, former RFC regional director in Detroit, president; George F. Buskie, vice president; Edgar A. Stanfield, general counsel, and Minot C. Mulligan, secretary. Stanfield formerly was assistant RFC general counsel, and Mulligan, who was released a few days ago from the Army, is a former assistant RFC secretary. Six of the seven members of the War Assets Board have been chosen. They are Sam H. Husbands, RFC director, chairman; Harvey J. Gunderson, another RFC member; David H. O'Brien and Merritt C. Penticoff, assistant administrators of the Surplus Property Administration, and the previously mentioned Buskie and Fushman.

CIVIL SERVICE: It is faced with the dismissal of between 850 and 900 more of its employes. The commission already has cut back to 5000 employes compared to 7500 in April. A new cut of two million dollars is proposed in the rescision bill which is now before the Senate. Chairman Downey of the Senate Civil Service Committee may make a fight for it on the Senate floor. He told the committee during hearings that the commission would be unable to do its work unless it was given the two million dollars. The Senator pointed out that the commission plans to replace many war service appointees with permanent Civil Service employes after the veterans are returned. "If the commission is deprived of its resources," he said, "these jobs cannot be thrown open to competition, and the opportunities for veterans in Federal jobs will be decreased to just that extent."

SLASHES: Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming tod the committee: (1) that 474 of its 2564 employes who are in placement work would be laid off. Many of the placement officers are assigned to separation centers and hospitals to give information to veterans. (2) About 125 of the 625 employes in the Retirement Division would be discharged. This would mean a serious baeglog will develop in handling claims for retirement deductions from employes who leave the service and in the adjudication of claims filed by employes who are retired. (3) In the service records division, 73 of 221 empoyes would be fired. "This means," said Flemming, "that veterans as well as nonveterans who seek to establish their rights to certain benefits within the Federal service will find it impossible to do so because our records are not up to date." If the cut goes through—and chances are it will—the commission will be criticized from all sides for delaying service to employes. But perhaps this is exactly what the anti-Civil Service boys want to see happen.

Homecoming Troops Reach Ports in U. S.

These names were telegraphed directly to The Washington Post by the Associated Press. There is no assurance that the list is correct, because it was compiled in Europe and at Pacific bases previous to embarkation, but officials said that the margin of error is slight. Relatives should not contact the port or The Washington Post for further information.

Landlocked Swiss Look Out to Sea

Basle, Switzerland (AP). — This landlocked country plans to continue maritime commerce as well as to resume river transportation, according to Nicholas Jaquet, director of the Swiss Navigation Companies.

Switzerland has eight ships, each of around 3000 tons, on the seas. Four of them are owned by the Swiss government, four by private companies. In addition, eight ships were chartered from Greece. The Swiss merchant marine was a wartime creation.

Australia Plans to Build Up Darwin as a Base

Darwin, Australia (AP).—Australia now is planning the future of its Northern Territory, with Darwin to be rebuilt as an air and naval base and the country's front door.

Darwin, severely bombed, is expected to have about 20,000 people in a few years' time. On September 1, 1939, the territory had 6973 whites and Asiatics on its 523,000 square miles.

3 Washington Women Win Commissions at WAC School

Three Washington women are among newly commissioned Wacs from the Officer Candidate School at Fort Des Moines, Iowa.

Stackhouse

They are Lieut. Dorothy Stackhouse, daughter of Mrs. Dorothy H. Stackhouse, 2200 19th st. nw.; Lieut. Alice I. Fowler, sister of Walter L. Fowler, 1360 Maple View pl. se., and Lieut. Lillian J. Larkin, daughter of Mrs. L. A. Larkin, jr., 315 Varnum st. nw.

Lieutenant Stackhouse, whose mother, Mrs. Dorothy H. Stackhouse, was recently discharged from the WAC, enlisted more than a year ago.

A former employe of the National Geographic Society here, Lieutenant Fowler has been in the service since February, 1943.

Newlyweds Parted By Prison Sentence

Akron, Ohio.—With the words, "Marriage is a partnership and you must both do your part to make it a success" still ringing in their ears, newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. George Goring turned from the "altar" and went their separate ways.

Only a few minutes before the ceremony Goring had been sentenced to prison for 1 to 15 years for burglarly.

Long-Armed Thief

Rochester, N. Y.—A long-armed sneak thief is believed to be at large in the city. Police report that the culprit reached in the first-floor window of a bedroom, where his victim was asleep, and "lifted" a pair of trousers which contained $400 in cash. The trousers, their pockets empty, were found in the yard of the home later.

Capt. McCarthy, Local Doctor, Put on Army's Inactive List

Capt. Charles L. McCarthy, USNR, who served as liaison officer with the Army Medical Service in the European theater, has been returned to inactive duty.

A skin specialist who practiced in the District for 17 years, he lived at 1705 N st. nw., prior to entering the service three years ago.

Others discharged from the District include four Wacs and an Army Air Forces sergeant, according to announcements received from separation centers yesterday.

Byrd Defeats Harrison for Mobile Golf Crown

'Ready for Baugh & Co.,' Says Eagle Coach

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Three Navy scouts were sitting in the press box high above Franklin Field on Saturday when Army scored nine toughdowns against Penn. They might have been tempted to advise Navy to negotiate for an honorable surrender insteadf of going through with the Army-Navy game two weeks hence. Certainly they were impressed with Army's ability to win football games by large scores.

POVICH

Suprisingly, though, the spokesman for the Navly trio came away with the idea that Navy could win the Army game. He didn't want to detract from Army's power, he said, but he didn't think Army beat much when it beat Penn. "Penn had the 'Army jitters,'" he said. "That's getting to be a disease wieh every club that goes up against Army. First they scare you and then they murder you."

"Navy's team will take no such item as 'Army jitters' onto the field December 1," he said. "Our boys aren't scared of anybody. We won't have any attack of nevers like Penn did. Did you see what happened? Penn fumbled the first kickoff, and Army got a quick touchdown. Then Penn fumbled the next kickoff. A nervous football team doesn't have any place on the same field with Army. It looked like a 60-to-0 game to me in th efirst five minutes."

Army has been dealing out physical beatings to its opposition all season as well as competitive lickings. For the most part they've been playing younger, greener teams. Navy is the only team on a parity with Army in age and football experience. The only team that could be a rougher outfit than Army is Novy, in fact. It's true that Navy doesn't scare easily.

"The best way I know of beating Army is to hit 'em harder than they hit you," the Navy man went on. "I wonder what will happen to some of those Army stars when they are sloughed by our boys in a perfectly legal sort of way, but hard. Maybe we'll slow Army up the way they've been slowing the other clubs up in the second half. We're as big as Army, and just as tough, I think."

For Navy supporters, that may sound like encouragement, but as yet no Navy man has offered an antidote for stopping Doc Blanchard or Glenn Davis, which is the only way to start beating Army. And if Navy happens to turn up with a formula that stops Blanchard and Davis, there's always Arnold Tucker and his touchdown passes. Army has many ways to win ball games.

The December 1 battle at Philadelhpia ought to be a prize dish, incidentally, for the students of en play. Probably never before have their been so many good ends on two teams. Navy is proud of its Dick Duden and Leon Bramlett, but Army fields four ends who are All-America timber. The end play should be a show in itself.

Navy will never admit that there's a better end than Duden, who catches passes, makes tackles, diagnoses plays and generally is a tremendous figure in every ball game. It's on Duden and Bramlett that will fall the chief task of bottling the whippet-like Davis on his wide sweeps and driving him inside. Army has not yet met up wth stalwarts like that pair, and Art Markel is a better-than-fair replacement.

Foldberg and Pitzer were Army's regular ends at the start of the season and nominally they still are the starting ends, but in recent games Army has come up with another pair who have outplayed Poole and Gremenstein now recommend themselves as Army's No. 1 ends, with Poole rated by observers as the best of the lot.

Against Army, Jim Pettit is likely to see more action in the Navy backfield than he has in any game thus far. Pettit is the only Navy back who can close to matching the speed of Glenn Davis. His tackle of Reykavich in the Notre Dame game of 1943 that saved a touchdown after Reykavich had a 10-yard lead on the Navy 40-yard line was an incredible display of speed.

The remaining two weeks before the Army game will find Navy coaches bearing down on the mental poise of their squad. The keynote will be: "You're tougher than Army, so go go out and show 'em." If it doesn't fetch a Navy victory, it should at least make it an interesting ball game, a descriptive that couldn't be used about Army gmaes thus far.

The comparative scores approach to Army vs. Navy is as zany as ever. A Notre Dame team that tied Navy 6-6 was licked 48-0 by Army. A Penn team that held Navy to 13-7, was buried under a 61-0 score by Army. But Michigan, which held Army to 20-6, lost to Navy 33-7. The person who tries to figure that out is a candidate for the violent ward.

Byrd's 69 Wins Golf Playoff

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 19 (AP).—Sam Byrd of Detroit blazed in with a 3-under-par 69 to win the $10,000 Azalea Open Golf Tournament today by one stroke in a playoff with Dutch Harrison of Little Rock.

The win gave the stocky former New York Yankee outfielder first prize money of $2000 in Victory Bonds. Harrison, who wound up with a 70, took second prize money of $1333 in Victory Bonds.

The two professionals were forced into an extra round when they ended up regular play yesterday with duplicate scores of 283.

Fifth Decided

Byrd, actualy won the match on the 391-yard fifteenth hole when lanky ex-caddy Harrison, discharged from the Army Air Corps two months ago, took a two-over-par six. Byrd was down in a regulation four.

The Arkansas shotmaker drove his tee shot into the woods at the right and found his ball behind a pine tree and buried in a slight hole. Playing it safe, Harrison chipped out into the fairway. His third shot carried over the green and his putt up was short. It took him two more to get down.

precipitation stopped just before

Matching shot for shot, the two were stroke for stroke and birdie for bordie the same through the first nine holes coming in with two under-par 34's.

Sank 12-Footer

Harrison held his one-stroke lead until the decisive fifteenth.

Byrd almost lost his advantage on the difficult par-4 seventeenth hole when his second shot missed the green, but he putted up within 18 inches of the cup and made his par. Harrison missed a birdie 3 here by inches and his last chance was gone.

Par	445	434	534	—36
Harrison.	444	434	434	—34
Byrd ...	444	434	434	—34
Par	444	534	444	—36	—72

Lateral Nets 9-Yard Gain for Lions Against Giants

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Buzz Trebotich, of the Detroit Lions, reaches for a lateral flipped him by Halfback Johnny Greene (10). The play brought the Lions nine yards and a first down, but they took a 35-14 beating from the Giants in the Polo Grounds, their second defeat of the season.

Neale Hopes To Reverse First Beating

Philadelphia, Nov. 19 (AP).—"We're ready for Sammy Baugh," Coach Earle J. (Greasy) Neale said with quiet confidence today as his Philadelphia Eagles began preparations for the decisive Washington Redskins battle Sunday.

The Eagles, gaining momentum weekly, have bowled over four straight pro football opponents since bowing to the Redskins at Washington on October 21.

"That," Neale said, "was one of those days when we didn't do anything right."

There were five halfbacks defending against Baugh's passes, but the former Texas Christian ace completed his tosses anyway and a comparatively unknown back named Frank Akins blasted the Eagle line for 168 yards.

Praises Frank Akins

"It was Akins' greatest performance" in the National Football League, Neale commented.

With the schedule sweeping into to last two weeks, the 'Skins hold a one-game edge over the Eagles. A victory for the Eagles would send the teams into a tie for the Eastern Division title and necessitate a playoff if both win their other remaining games.

The Eagles will be at peak strength for the Redskins. Fleet Halfback Ernie Steele, sidelined most of the season with a bad ankle, will be ready to go. He clipped off sprints of 47 yards against New York a week ago and 41 yards against Pittsburgh yesterday.

Jack Hinkle, out with a shoulder separation since an exhibition game, will work out this week and may be able to play Sunday.

Humbert Returns to Fold

Dick Humbert, former University of Richmond end who finished second to Don Hutson among pass receivers when he played with the Eagles in 1941, returned to the fold in time to snare four passes yesterday.

Neals said he believes that in Humbert and Jack Ferrante he has the best pair of pass-snagging ends in the circuit.

The approaching game has been a sellout for three weeks and a record Shibe Park crowd of 40,000 is foreseen.

Bagarus' Play Against Bears Still Lauded

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

From the dingiest pool parlor to fashionable Chevy Chase drawing rooms, all of Washington yesterday was still replaying Sunday's out-of-this-world Redskin-Bear battle and, quite naturally, most of the talk concerned the town's latest choice for mayor if we had a mayor—Steve Bagarus.

Virtually an unknown to Washington fans hardly two months ago, the former Notre Dame will o' the wisp today is racing his way to one of the most sensational seasonal performances in Redskin history, a history, incidentally, that has included such fabulous names and players as Sammy Baugh, Cliff Battles, Riley Smith, Erny Pinckert, Andy Farkas, Dick Todd, the unpredictable "Wee Willie" Wilkin, etc.

Until this year he never played in Washington and local fans were a little dubious about the rave notices he received from the gents who covered the Redskins playing in California, Utah, Colorado, Chicago and Baltimore, where he cavorted with great success against the Bears, Packers, Lions and service teams in exhibition games.

Played Brilliantly

What should happen to a dog was mild compared to what happened to the erstwhile bad Bears from Chicago as the Hungarian boy put rings in their noses Sunday and made 'em behave, not, however, without trouble.

His 17-yard run gave the Redskins their first touchdown; his catch and subsequent 60-yard thriller-gallop of a Baugh pass accounted for the second; his 28-yard runback of a punt set up the third tally, and it was his 18-yard runback of another kick that ignited the spark for the fourth and winning tally.

He was a pretty busy guy Sunday.

If he was unknown when he first came here a little over two months ago he isn't today by a long shot.

All day yesterday letters, telegrams and phone calls came with all sorts of offers. Different people want him to play professional basketball, others want him for stage, screen, radio and night club engagements at money not to be sneezed at. A few others want him to indorse certain well-known advertised commodities.

Could Go Commercial

One enterprising fellow wants to pay him merely for dining every day in his restaurant so that the restaurateur may point him out to the rest of the trade, which in this instance, is carriage trade.

Talent Comes Cheap . . .

Army's 'Greatest' Grid Team Has Lowest-Paid U. S. Coach

By Bob Considine

New York, Nov. 19 (INS).—Col. Earl "Red" Blaik, the quiet craftsman who built the Army football team into one of the greatest powers in grid history, is the lowest paid coach in United States collegiate football ranks.

It was revealed today at West Point that Blaik is paid $3500 a year "plus the use of a house." His total financial income for the season was placed "at between $4100 and $4200." The Army wonder team will play to more than $1,000,000 in gate receipts this season.

Blaik's base pay in the Army of $3500 is $8500 less per year than Lieut. Paul Brown, USNR, is paid for not coaching. Brown is receiving $1000 a month retainer fee from the Cleveland Browns of the All America Football League, which begins operations next fall. Brown's salary will be $25,000 with the Browns.

Average salary of the college coaches whose clubs Army has swamped this year in rolling up 380 points to opponents' 33 is $15,000. A number of United States coaches make more than $15,000, including Lou Little of Columbia; Bernie Bierman of Minnesota, Fritz Crisler of Michigan, Frank Thomas of Alabama and Clark Shaugnessy of Pittsburgh.

Uniform Costly

Blaik himself was cut from $15,000 to less than his present salary when he went back into uniform in 1943 with the rank and pay of a Lieutenant Colonel. He graduated from West Point in 1920 and retired in 1922, but retained his reserve status.

Close friends of the master coach assert that Blaik's football career will end at Army. He will don civilian clothes shortly after the Navy game, at which time he will regain his old $15,000 stipend. But no larger offer from another school or professional club will tempt him.

Blaik will return to his building business in Dayton, Ohio, when he feels he has "done his job" at West Point.

Aces Held Over

His 1946 team will have the services of the same stellar backfield which has been the scourge of football for the last two season. Among these will be Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard, All-America aces. Davis' twin brother, Ralph, will move up from the "B" squad.

Blaik came to West Point from Dartmouth as head coach early in 1941, after Army's disastrous 1940 season had seen it lost, 48-0, to Penn and, 45-0, to Cornell.

Blaik was paid $12,500 a year at Dartmouth, where his team set records for attendance. Curiously, his Army teams were something less than sensational during the two years he was paid $15,000 by the academy. His 1941 club won five, lost three and tied one. The following season Army won six and lost three.

But coincident with his heavy reduction in pay, after going into uniform, Blaik's clubs began to roll. Through 1943, 1944 and 1945 Army's record is 24 victories, 2 losses and 1 tie. Blaik has won his last 17 games in a row, including Army's first two consecutive victories over Notre Dame.

First Long Streak

If Army beats Navy December 1 in its final game—the Cadets will be favored to win by perhaps 30 points—Blaik will have given Army its first twin unbeaten years in a football history dating back to the gay nineties. During the two-year span, despite war restrictions, the Army team has played to 800,000 spectators.

Blaik is opposed to a Rose Bowl appearance for the 1945 team, despite heavy pressure being brought to bear on him from all sides, including the Los Angeles parents of the fabulous halfback, Davis.

He would prefer to wind things up in traditional fashion with the Navy game in Philadelphia.

Mailley Joins D. C. Lions for Oriole Clash

Frank Mailley, iron defenseman of the American Hockey League while skating for the old Washington Lions three years ago, comes back with the Eastern League Lions tonight when they face Baltimore's Orioles in a continuation of their fierce feud on Uline ice at 8:30 o'clock.

Coach Maxie Bennett announced that Mailley had agreed to terms late yesterday, and will be used on the first line of defense with Capt. Hal Hursley tonight. Vern Kaiser and Alf Turner will man the second defensive unit.

A newcomer will make his debut with the Lions when Nelson "Freckles" Little, 20-year-old goal tender of the New Haven Eagles, goes into the nets for Washington. Little turned in a splendid game in goal last Saturday night as the Lions bowed to the League leading Falcons in Philadelphia, 3-1, and is talent scout Eddie Shore's nominee to launch a winning streak for the Lions tonight.

Three key men of the Baltimore Blades of a year ago will face their old mates tonight. Captain Hurlsey, Nestor Lubeck and Paul Bedard, the latter pair forwards, will enter a strong bid for an upset.

The Clippers, now under the direction of Coach Herb Mitchell, turned in a major upset in Baltimore Sunday when they defeated the Falcons, 6-1, and will rule a slight favorite tonight on the basis of that performance.

Larry Frechette, goalie; Jimmy Casburn, Ed Vigneau and Jack Riley, wingmen; mustachioed Pat Wilson and the veteran Bud Foley, defensemen, are some of Baltimore's best bets.

Eastern League Plans 140 Games

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 19 (INS).—Directors of the Eastern League today adopted a 140-game schedule for 1946, opening May 1 and ending September 8.

In the opening games, Utica will meet Binghamton at the latter city; Albany will open at Hartford, Elmire at Williamsport and Scranton at Wilkes Barre.

Md. Suspends 'Chase Jockey For One Year

Baltimore, Nov. 19 (AP).—The Maryland Racing Commission ruled Jockey James McGovern off the State's tracks for one year today after a hearing in which he was accused of having given an unsatisfactory ride at a November 2 Pimlico steeplechase.

Stewards testified that in their opinion McGovern's horse, Abidale, probably would have finished first had the 35-year-old jockey handled the animal more satisfactorily.

The commission took under advisement the case of Norwalk Stables, which it suspended from racing in Maryland October 24 until its ownership could be "determined to the satisfaction of the commission."

At the previous hearing, Commission Chairman George P. Mahoney declared the ownership of the stable was not clear because of a number of transactions between Edward Segal, the present owner, and his brothers, Harry and Samuel.

The investigation began after a Norwalk trainer, J. J. Bauer, was barred indefinitely from Maryland tracks after tests showed one of his horses had received a stimulant prior to a race.

Today, Segal offered bills of sale and income tax forms as proof of ownership. He said the stable had passed into his possession in October, 1944.

He added, however, that since then virtually all affairs of the stable—which, he said, has made no money—were under the direction of his brother, Harry, although he, Edward Segal, paid the bills.

He was asked whether he—and another brother before him—did not maintain the stable "to keep Harry occupied," and Segal declared this was to some degree the case. He denied having entered racing "for Harry's benefit," as Deputy Attorney General Hall Hammond suggested.

Mack Invites Knott to Return

Brownwood, Tex., Nov. 19 (AP).—First Lieut. Jack Knott, Brownwood, whose discharge from the Army became effective today, has been invited by Connie Mack to rejoin the Philadelphia Athletics February 20 at West Palm Beach, Fla.

A veteran of 13 years in the majors, the Brownwood man is said to be the first major leaguer to win a commission in World War II. He won it on a battlefield.

He was discharged at Fort Ord, Calif.

Knott said he'd like, if possible, to get a job as player-coach or manager. He managed the 104th Timberwolf Division Club which won the 1943 Oregon State semi-pro and Pacific Northwest servicemen's titles.

Boston Paper Says Crusaders Received Bid

Boston, Nov. 19 (U.P.).—The Boston Traveler said today that Holy Cross, despite its defeat by Temple last Saturday, will receive and accept an invitation to play in the Orange Bowl at Miami on New Year's Day.

(Orange Bowl officials in Miami, refused to comment on the report. "Orange Bowl game rumors are as plentiful these home stretch days as Japanese war souvenirs on a returning troopship," Schedule Committee Chairman William M. Preston said. "The committee refuses to comment on this new rumor." Holy Cross long has been high on the committee's list of prospective teams, although Duke was rated first choice in its latest announcement.)

The Traveler story said that "regardless of whether official verification of this statement comes before or after Sunday's clash with Boston College at Fenway Park, it can be stated positively that the Crusaders did not eliminate themselves from consideration by their startling setback."

Army Player Lone 'Casualty'

New York, Nov. 19 (INS).—The Juggernaut Army football team suffered one "casualty" following last Saturday's 61-0 viceory over Penn.

He is Albert M. Nemetz, a lineman, it was revealed tonight. Nemetz rushed into the locker room after the game and took a swig from a bottle resting next to the drinking water.

The liquid turned out to be adhesive-tape remover.

Gets Tulsa Reins

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 19 (AP).—Donald M. Shields, one of the Nation's leading players from 1935 through 1942, will take over December 1 as head basketball coach at the University of Tulsa.

Maryland Eleven Prepares For Powerful Va. Saturday

By Newton Bowers
Post Staff Writer.

The University of Maryland's battle-scarred, but nonetheless high-spirited Terps, yesterday turned the halfway mark in their two-week "rest period" and got down to some serious business, that of preparing to meet University of Virginia's potent Cavaliers Saturday in Griffith Stadium.

Limiting most of last week to getting the kinks out of their system, the Terrapins, who blasted their way back into Southern Conference prominence a fortnight ago when they soundly thrashed a favored Virginia Military crew, 38-0, expect trouble aplenty when they clash with the Cavalier juggernaut, and Head Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant stressed this yesterday.

With upward of 20,000 fans expected to be on hand, the Terps will enter the fray rank underdogs and realizing that a victory may well carry them to dazzling heights. The powerful Cavaliers, among the Nation's unbeaten elevens, also are well aware that they will have a busy afternoon keeping Maryland in check.

Can Hurt Chances

The game can make or break Virginia, which is reported in line for an Orange Bowl bid. If the Terps emerge triumphant, Virginia's chances of the bowl offer may suffer, while the Terps possibly would have a crack at it.

While Maryland has its troubles in way of casualties, Virginia also has a few headaches—the chief of which finds Charley Ellis, star quarterback who handles the Cavalier T with masterful precision, currently in the university hospital with injuries suffered in the Virginia 40-0 victory over Oceana Naval Air Station last Saturday.

Ellis, who has been a key man in keeping Virginia's record spotless this year, and whom Maryland scouts claim is the best collegiate quarterback in the Natiton at handling the T offensive, has shown signs of improving, but it is still doubtful that he will be ready for action against the Terps.

Turyn Still Ailing

Meanwhile, Maryland's quarterback situation is none too bright yet. Vic Turyn, tall, well-built West Virginian, is still down with influenza and Bryant continues to express doubt that he will play. George Van Wagner, former Devitt ace, may be called upon to start at quarterback. Freshman Van Wagner shone against VMI. He is considerably green, though, and lacks some of the finesse required to handle the Maryland's Alabama box, a form of the T.

Still, with Joe Pietrowski, triple-threat halfback, in the line-up, the Terps will offer their best offensive of the season. Pietrowski was the big difference in VMI tussle, his booming punts and dazzling running setting the Keydets back on their heels all during the afternoon.

All in all, Bryant will have a lot of talent to throw at the Old Dominion club, centered around Pietrowski, Sammy Behr, Bonk, Dick Tolar, Bob Piker and George Van Wagner, backs, but then, Virginia will counter with some pretty good players, too.

Veteran Yale Sports Head Quits Post

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 19 (AP). Ogden D. Miller, Yale's director of athletics and associate dean of freshmen, resigned today, effective next January 1, to accept the headmaster's job at the Gunnery School in Washington, Conn.

Miller's resignation was accepted "with deep regret" by President Charles Seymour, who said, "his great services to the university have been manifested in various fields of the first importance and characterized always by unstinted devotion and ability of the highest order."

Nothing was said in Yale's announcement about a successor for Miller, who also served as assistant secretary of the university and has been a member of the Elis' staff since his graduation from Yale College in 1930.

Miller was named athletic director in 1940 at the age of 35, assistant dean of freshmen in 1943, and associate dean a short time later.

Havana Sought As Fla. Contender

Miami, Fla., Nov. 18 (AP).—Representatives from seven cities sponsoring the Florida International Baseball League will go to Columbus, Ohio, December 4-6 to petition the National Association of Baseball Clubs for inclusion of Havana in the newly-organized Class C baseball league.

"Without Havana we've got a good organization; with Havana, we've got a great one," declared Judge Wayne Allen of Miami, who was elected league president today.

Club sponsors frim Miami, Miami Beach, Fort Lauderdale, West Palm Beach, Tampa, Lakeland and Fort Myers will be joined in the plea for Havana league membership by baseball interests from the Cuban capital.

Russian to Face Milo on Mat

A throwback to the old days of Graeco-Roman European wrestling matches will be offered in tomorrow night's special 30-minute match between Kola Kwariani, the Russian title claimant, and Milo Steinborn, the Memphis "Strong Man," at Turner's Arena.

Steinborn, who once held the European title, and Kwariani, who drew last week with Tommy Mahoney in his debut, will clash in support of the championship match between Babe Sharkey, the recognized titleholder, and Ivan Talun, the seven-foot Polish giant.

Washington College Opens Season Nov. 26

Chestertown, Md., Nov. 19 (AP). Washington College's basketball quintet opens its season here November 26 against the Fort Miles Army five, and Coach Henry Carrington has been working his squad of 18 team candidates at a feverish pace.

Washington's schedule includes home-and-home games with Fort Miles; St. Joseph College at Philadelphia; Berdeen Bombers, there, and Johns Hopkins in Chestertown on December 15.

Reds in 'Red'

Cincinnati, Nov. 19 (U.P.).—The Cincinnati Reds who played at home before 290,070 fans this season ended up $30,865 in the red, Powell Crosley, jr., president, reported to stockholders at the annual meeting today.

Slammin' Sammy

Sammy Byrd, former major league ball player who yesterday defeated Dutch Harrison in the playoff of the Mobile golf open. Byrd carded a three-under-par 69, to top Harrison by one stroke in the 18-hole playoff.

Travis Jackson Named Manager

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 19 (AP).—Travis Jackson, former New York Giant shortstop and ex-major league infielder, has been named manager of the Jackson Senators of the southeastern league.

He signed a one-year contract over the weekend and will accompany Sam H. Newell, president of the club, and E. A. Vaughey, vice president, to the annual meeting of the National Association of Minor Leagues in Columbus, Ohio, the first week in December.

Army-Pro Grid Game Left Up to West Point

Washington, Nov. 19 (U.P.).—War Department spokesmen said tonight that a suggested Christmas Day football game between Army's powerhouse Cadets and the National Pro League championship team for the benefit of disabled World War II veterans is something that would have to be decided by the U. S. Military Academy superintendent.

The White House said it had not received such a proposal and therefore was not commenting.

4 Players Stand Out on All-Midwest Team

Chicago, Nov. 19, (INS).—There can be little debate concerning the qualifications of at least four of the men chosen for the International News Service All-Midwest football team.

These four are Max Morris, Northwestern end, and Backs Pete Pihos of Indiana, Frank Dancewicz of Notre Dame, and George Taliaferro of Indiana.

This quartet has been outstanding through the season.

Selecting their teammates was a bit more difficult, for the season drawing to a close this week was marked by the deterioration of the play, due to war-time conditions, that in seasons past has ranked Mid-Western football teams among the Nation's best.

And as team calibre has fallen the performance of individuals.

It is fitting that Notre Dame, which plays the most rigorous schedule of any team in the country, and Indiana, which will win its first big 10 championship unless upset by Purdue, each place three men on the International News Service All-Midwest team.

Jim Kekeris of Missouri would be an all-star standout in any conference. Kekeris, a tackle who also filled in at fullback, really threw his weight around—and he weighs an even 300 pounds. Despite his bulk, he is an accurate kicker, and a fast-charging, bruising lineman.

But almost every team had at least one outstanding star.

There was, for instance, Clarence Esser who played a brilliant tackle on Wisconsin's inept team, and Jerry Niles, who scintillated on an Iowa team that lost seven straight games until he personally kicked the field goal for the extra point that gave the Hawkeyes a 20-to-19 victory over Minnesota last Saturday.

But the best summary of the gridiron season in the Middle West is the selections.

An honorable mention list would go on and on, but especially deserving of mention in any All-Midwest selection are Russ Deal, Indiana tackle; Dick Howard and Gene Phelps, the scatback twins of Iowa State; George Gear, the Kansas Jayhawkers' brilliant freshman quarterback; Dick Conners, Northwestern's great frosh halfback, and Lennie Brown, the 139-pound quarterback, who is the "Mr. Brains" of Missouri's potential Big Six champions.

24,000 to See Annual Clash Of VPI, VMI

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 19 (AP).—When the Virginia Tech Gobblers battle the Keydets of Virginia Military Institute in the "military classic of the South" Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, at Victory Stadium in Roanoke, their probable starting line will have a weight average of 189 pounds and the backs will hit the 170 mark. Over 24,000 fans are expected to be on hand for the Turkey Day clash. The kickoff has been set for 2:15.

If Head Coach Macauley McEver starts the same eleven he used in whipping Richmond Saturday—and he hasn't said he wouldn't—Sumner Tilson and Jefferey Zekert will be at ends, Ross Orr and Bob Hess at tackles, Tim Lawler and John Hamilton in the guard slots, Tom Burns at center, Stan Majcher calling from quarterback, Ralph Beard and Floyd Bowles at halfbacks, and Jay Ratliff in the fullback position. Other backs who may see service are Bobby Wellman, a classy passer; Charley Forbes and Clint Barnes.

McEver did not expect to send the squad through heavy drilling while prepping for the Keydets as he wants to protect his men from possible injury on the eve of the all-important test. As things stand now Harry Bushkar is the only player who will probably be benched as a result of injuries. He is still nursing a recurrent rib ailment.

Backfield Coach Gene McEver warned the Techmen not to sell the Keydets short as a result of the Catawba licking. The backfield mentor has been scouting the charges of Coach Pooley Hubert and he told the Gobblers they must be prepared for a hard-running attack featuring Lynn Chewning, Bom Thomason and Bill Hawkins. VMI runs from the single wingback formation.

Thursday's battle will be the forty-first renewal of the old classic. Tech has a record of 25 wins; 11 setbacks and 4 draws in the 40-year-old.

Silvestra Discharged

Camp Grant, Ill., Nov. 19 (AP).—Catcher Ken Silvestri, an Army veteran of South Pacific action, has been discharged from military service and will rejoin the New York Yankees for spring training February 1.

Cranford to Meet Biggers Monday

Jackie Cranford, Washington heavyweight contender, has been matched against Dan Biggers, Baltimore slugger, in one of the eight-round bouts on next Monday night's all-star show at Turner's Arena.

Previously closed out was an eight-rounder between Charlie Milan of Baltimore and Domingo Russell of New York, while Matchmaker Gabe Menendez is seeking an opponent for Herbie (Biff) Jones, Eastern's "Fighting Schoolboy," for a third eight. Four eight-round matches are scheduled.

McClintock's Horse Pays $174 Price

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 19.—The Ergehill Stable's He Rolls, away from the winner's circle since early last summer, found a track to his liking and whipped four rivals in The Arlington, best offering on a Monday program.

Going in speedboat fashion over the canal-like racing strip, He Rolls landed at the finish line a length and a half in front of the Sandy Lane Farm's Dinner Party, the heavily-backed favorite. Three lengths farther back came Clarence Turner's Bon Jour to be third.

There was gold at the Old Hilltop track today in the form fo a $1017 payoff on the daily double and a $174 individual mutuel. The day's big price was paid by V. S. McClintock's Pilates Dream in the second race. Apprentice R. Lang rode Pilates Dream and also was aboard S. Myers' Woodbuck, the $7.20 winner of the first race. The winning daily double combination was "12 and 9."

With Jockey M. N. Gonzalez doing the booting, He Rolls brought his backers a $10 mutuel and recorded time of 1:57 1-5. The track was sloppy as the result of rain that began with the start of the program. A crowd of 10,000 saw the action.

He Rolls, who seldom sets pace, went right to the front and there were no catchers. Dinner Party was off slowly, but soon joined Bon Jour, who was closest to the pacemaker. In the stretch, Herb Claggett put Dinner Party to intermittent punishment but the son of Cavalcade could not seriously menance the winner.

The victory was the fourth of the year in 16 tries for He Rolls and brought him $2200 to bring his season's earnings to $20,887.

BETWEEN RACES—Steeplechase Jockey W. Passmore got a big hand and saved himself from possible injuries . . . At the final fence, Ugly Duckling stumbled and threw Passmore up in the air. The boy landed lying across the saddle but managed to squirm back and brought the horse in second . . . The annual dinner of the Maryland Horseman's Protective Association will be staged tomorrow at the Belvedere Hotel starting at 6:30 p. m. . . . Fred Caposella, who handles the public address system at most New York and Florida tracks, will do the announcing at Charles Town for the meeting opening December 1.

For some reason, the stewards ordered saliva tests of the first four horses in the Pimlico Special last Saturday and also took the test on all horses in the seventh race on the same program . . . From all appearances only the winners were being tested today . . . Calumet Farm's Armed, winner of the Pimlico Special, was assigned top weight of 132 pounds for the $25,000 Riggs Handicap on Saturday.

Jockey "Noboy" Jake is selling "The Jockey Year Book" containing the history of the riders in the country . . . Jake is donating his services with all profits going to the Jockeys Guild to be used for needy present and past riders.

Middies Check On Badger Films

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 19 (AP).—Navy's gridders, faced with a soggy field after an afternoon downpour of rain, had a look today at movies of Saturday's game which they trounced Wisconsin 36-7.

Coach Oscar E. Hagberg went over the filmed plays with the squad pointing out errors and fine play as the first setp in preparing the team for the game with Army December 1 at Philadelphia. The Middies emerged from the weekend game without any severe injuries—probably for the first time this season.

Irish to Draw Largest Crowd Ever in South

New Orleans, Nov. 19, (AP).—Tulane's athletic director, Horace Renegar, announced today that the largest crowd ever to see a regular season football game in the South—between 65,000 and 72,000—is a "certainty" for Notre Dame's visit here Saturday.

Idle Lynn Chewning Still Holds Conference Scoring Lead

Richmond, Va., Nov. 19 (AP).—For the third consecutive week Lynn Chewning's 54 points stand as the best performance to date of any individual scorer in the Southern Conference.

Chewning's mark was set three weeks ago when he tallied 8 points in Virginia Military Institute's defeat of Vanderbilt. Since that time the freshman sensation in the Keydets' backfield has had little opportunity to add to it.

Early in the contest with Maryland November 10 the Richmond youngster was injured and taken fro mthe game. He still was unable to play Saturday when VPI was defeated, 14-7, by Catawba.

Injuries to other kingpin scorers in the conference and the fact that many teams have faced tough opponents or have had open dates were contributing factors which may have enabled Chewning's mark to stand.

Tommy Korczowski, William and Mary left halfback, has only added six points to his score in the Indians' last four games. The touchdown which brought his total to 48 was made Saturday when the Tribe easily defeated a team from Kings Point Merchant Marine Academy.

George Clark, who was commissioned by the Navy and lost to the Duk squad, had made 42 points and early in the season was out in front in the conference. Bobby Thomason, another VMI backfield ace, has 38 points.

Also among the high scorers are Maryland's Harry Bonk and Bill Poling with 43 points each. Maryland remained idle Saturday as did South Carolina, thus keeping the Gamecocks' Dutch Brenes from adding to his 37 points. North Carolina State's Howard Turner, unable to play Friday against Miami because of injuries, follows with 36.

For the Dry-est Martini in the world!
Seagram's Ancient Bottle distilled dry Gin
Golden as mellow candle-light is the color of Seagram's Ancient Bottle Gin. It's naturally golden because of Seagram's leisurely time-honored way of producing it. This results in a gin so smooth, so lacking in any permeating trace of juniper flavor that with it you can truly make "The Dry-est Martini in the World."
No covering flavors are needed, yet no ginny taste comes through. It is a gin so sippingly smooth that you will even enjoy it straight.
Distilled from 100 per cent American grain. 90 Proof

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Has Drifted for 10 Years in Relation To Girl He Doesn't Love, Who Loves Him; Does He Owe Her Marriage? Would It Last?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have known a certain young woman for about 10 years, have seen her two or three times a week until recently and enjoy her company, as we have many common interests. I have made it clear from the beginning that I am not in love with her and had no immediate intention of marrying.

More than once I have urged her to see other men more, instead of wasting her time on me. Once, several years ago, she agreed we should stop seeing each other. So we went our separate ways and I made no attempt to get in touch with her. However, after six months she asked me to come back, saying she couldn't be happy that way. She wanted my company even though she knew I didn't love her.

Possibly I should have stayed away, as the best thing for her. But that seemed mean, in view of her feelings; and I decided she was old enough to run her life without my advice. So we resumed association. A year ago, I moved to another city. I thought that would bring a solution—either by convincing me that I do love her, or by forcing her to form other ties and so forget me. Neither has happened.

Doesn't Miss Her Company

I SEE her about once a month as business takes me there, and she is sure as ever that there will never be anyone but me. She could easily attract other men if she tried, for she is very attractive, well educated, of good family, successful in her own business and looks about 25, although we are both past 35. I still like her more than anyone else I know, but I am also quite sure I don't love her; at least, when we are apart.

She should have given me up long ago; probably still should—as you have so well advised other girls whose men don't propose. But as she won't take that solution, what should I do? Should I marry her on the theory that it is only fair, after all these years? That would make her happy, temporarily at least. But if I don't love her, wouldn't it really be unfair to both of us in the long run and end badly? Or isn't love important at our age, if we agree on everything else? I am puzzled by the situation and would appreciate your comment. A. D.

Complacency Blinds Him

DEAR A. D.: I think a very marked degree of inter-dependency has already been established here, and that your unconscious need of the girl's allegiance is matched only by your self-centered complacency. Compassion is not a man's long suit in dealing with women, and you have consistently absorbed this girl's homage because you want it,—because nowhere else have you found anything comparable to it in comfort-giving value,—and not in the least out of altruist concern for her.

Shakespeare says, "Those friends thou hast, and their endurance tried, grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel." And at your age, I doubt that you will ever find another woman who will give you as much contentment with freedom of mind as she. Once decisively committed to the proposition of being her married companion, I believe you might find yourself a happier man, both in your own heart and in relation to her, than you have ever been before.

He Who Gives Gets Happiness

I DON'T think you should marry her from a sense of duty. A less fortunate arrangement for both could hardly be imagined, over the long haul. And as she has clung to the laissez-faire arrangement from choice, you owe her only what your true feelings dictate. But the fact that you are beginning voluntarily to play with the idea of marriage suggests to me that you ought to go ahead with it; and that you will profit in the long run by it.

A man has not matured, and indeed is a stranger to the deepest satisfactions life has to offer, until he has undertaken the experience of giving happiness to others—preferably those who are loyal to him and appropriate candidates for his unselfish consideration.

Miss Rothrock, Col. Bunting Exchange Vows

MRS. CLYDE BUNTING
. . . On Southern honeymoon

On an extended honeymoon trip to the Southern States and Mexico are Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Clyde Bunting, who were married Friday night in the chapel of Walter Reed Hospital. The bride, the former Miss Peggy Anne Rothrock, was given in marriage by her uncle, Howard Rothrock, Weatherly, Pa. Chaplain Z. B. T. Cox officiated at the candlelight ceremony.

The bride wore an 18th century gown of ivory satin, with seed pearls outlining the low neck and tracing a design on the full skirt which extended in a train. Pearls also trimmed the bonnet from which fell a finger-tip veil and the bride carried a white prayer book and corsage of white orchids.

Miss Cumile Hatchett, matron of honor, was attired in ice blue chiffon and carried maroon chrysanthemums. Miss Nancy Lou Rothrock attended her sister in peach satin and chiffon. The bride's other attendants were the Misses Jeanne Hartz, Virginia Hampton, Cinderella Dinges and Wanda Tindel, gowned respectively in pink, yellow, lavender and blue and carrying sprays of assorted roses.

Maj. Herman Ude acted as best man and Maj. E. R. Edson and Maj. Jack P. Clark were ushers.

A reception followed at the Mayflower.

Prior to her marriage Mrs. Bunting was engaged in war work in Washington with the Army Service Forces, the Executive Office of the President and the office, Secretary of War.

The bridegroom is well known in local Army circles, having served in the office, Chief of Engineers, and Headquarters, Army Service Forces, prior to assignment in the Pacific, from which he returned recently.

Out-of-town guests included the bride's mother and brother, Mrs. Charles Edward Rothrock and Charles, jr., Mrs. Robert H. Rothrock, 3d, Mrs. William R. Vack, Mr. and Mrs. Howard E. Rothrock and Miss Ruth White, Weatherly, Pa.; Mrs. Florence Marks, cousin of the bridegroom, and son, Billy, Parkfairfax, Va.

Colonel Bunting is returning to civilian life and after their honeymoon, he and Mrs. Bunting will go to his home in Boise, Idaho, where they will take up their residence.

Schedule Dinner

The Washington Alumni Chapter of Sigma Chi fraternity will hold its annual Constantine dinner December 7 at the Statler Hotel in honor of Charles G. Ross, Press Secretary to President Truman.

Signora Tarchiani Is Guest of Honor At Club Meeting

Signora Tarchiani, wife of the Italian Ambassador, was guest of honor and speaker yesterday, at the regular meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club. Accompanied by her daughters, Letizia and Dora, she was introduced by Mrs. William Clayton. Presiding over the meeting was Mrs. William H. Davis.

The Signora gave an exciting and realistic account of life in Paris before the outbreak of the war and how her husband made his escape from Italy because of anti-Fascist views. She also warned against indifference to international affairs.

Anderson-Camper Ceremony Read

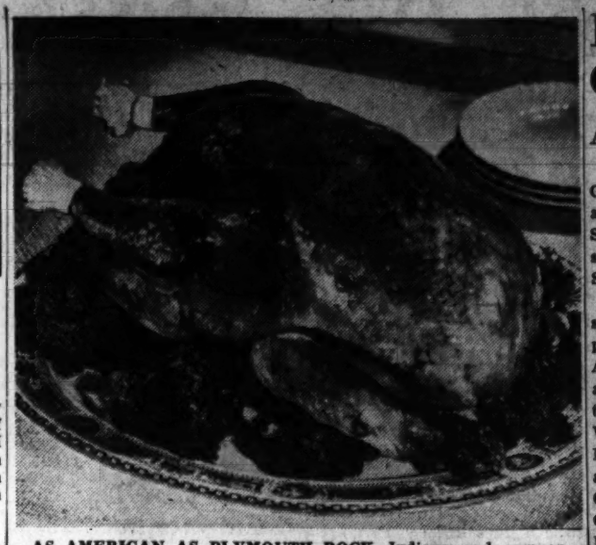
Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Davis, Port Chester, N. Y., announce the marriage of their niece, Miss Bette A. Camper, to Corpl. Norbert P. Anderson, AUS, Bay City, Mich., where the wedding took place recently.

The bride wore a fuchsia suit with black accessories and corsage of gardenias. Matron of honor was Mrs. Chester Anderson, Bay City, and best man was Chester Anderson.

Mrs. Anderson was graduated from the Washington School for Secretaries, New York, and Rhode Island State College.

Corporal Anderson has been in the Armed Forces for more than three years and has been with the Office of Strategic Services for the past year.

The couple will live in Bay City when the corporal receives his discharge from the Army.



AS AMERICAN AS PLYMOUTH ROCK, Indians, and corn on the cob, is roast turkey. Cook the bird so that it will be succulent, tender and golden-brown, and serve with all the pomp due this traditional holiday food

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

This Year Thanksgiving Takes On Festive Spirit of Old Days

There's a long trail of Thanksgiving from 1621 to 1945. The Pilgrim Fathers were thankful for their first Thanksgiving, because from field and orchards they had garnered and stored foods to nourish them from an imminent and intemperate winter. They sang the old hymn, "Come, ye thankful people, come raise the song of harvest home." We can sing the same song with even more feeling, for we should be extra thankful this year because the war is over and many families are again united.

Our dreams are getting better all the time—so are realities. Even nylon hose are returning and at a lower cost because OPA has just announced about a 25 per cent cut in prices. The Department of Agriculture's announcement about poultry is one of good cheer. The biggest crop on record of broilers, fryers and roasting chickens, plus an ample supply of turkeys, has been produced. Civilians, they say, will have more turkey this year than in the record year of 1942, when the supply averaged 3.7 pounds per capita. The prewar average was 2.6 pounds. Because of this bounteous supply we should give thanks to the farmers and poultrymen.

Turkey Spirit

From that first Thanksgiving offered by the Pilgrims, dinner has always been the mainspring of the day, and turkey the feast bird. But if you can't have turkey, you may have chicken, duck, goose or meat of some kind. Whatever it is that gets the honored place on the platter, it should be served in the spirit of the turkey.

If a whole turkey is too much for your needs, or too large for your oven, then consider a half one. Cooks should be glad to know of the innovation of some markets selling half turkeys.

A large young turkey, split in half lengthwise is the right size for the average roasting pan, and the customary succulent roast turkey will result. Some markets not only halve the turkey but put half of the neck and halved giblets in the turkey cavity. Large turkeys selling at prices cheaper per pound also have the advantage of more meat. Size is not a determining factor in the age and tenderness of a bird, advises Miss Kathryn Bele Niles, home economics director, Poultry and Egg National Board. And this is the way she says to cook half a turkey:

ROAST HALF TURKEY

Clean the bird as usual. Rub the cut side with salt, allowing one-eighth teaspoon to a pound of bird. Skewer skin to breast meat on the keel-bone edge to prevent shrinking of skin and to protect breast meat. Tie leg, just above the knuckle joint, securely to the tail. No other trussing is necessary. The wing should be left flat against breast. Place half turkey cut side down on a flat rack in shallow pan. Brush bird with melted fat and cover with a clean cloth (cheesecloth is excellent), dipped in the fat. Roast at a constant moderate low temperature (325 degrees F.). Do not sear. Do not cover pan. Do not add water. Allow one cup dressing, a pound of bird. Mound dressing on a well-greased double-thickness of waxed paper or foil to approximate the shape of the half turkey's cavity. When bird is half done (1½ to 2 hours), remove from oven and place paper with dressing on rack. Since it will not be possible to stuff the breast of the half turkey, make an extra casserole of dressing. Spoon fat from bottom of pan to remoisten cloth. Roasting a half turkey will require 25 to 30 minutes a pound at 325 degrees. To tell when turkey is done, press the fleshy part of the drumstick with your fingers protected by cloth or paper. When done the meat feels very soft.

Selection of Bird

Since size does not necessarily indicate the tenderness of a turkey, it is well to know what to look for in selecting one. The marks of quality are: Clean, waxy skin with few pinfeathers and no bruises or discoloration; well-fleshed breast and legs, generally plump appearance, streaks of fat under skin on breast, legs, thighs and back, the quantity increasing with the bird's age, short body and broad breast indicate a meat bird, frozen turkeys should be HARD and show no discoloration.

If you want an 8 to 15 pound bird buy a HEN turkey for they mature quickly and are usually better finished than toms of the same weight. Buy a TOM if you want a 16 to 25 pound bird. They are at their best at this weight and the best choice for a large bird.

Correct roasting is slow cooking by dry heat on a rack in an open pan. It requires no water, no basting, no cover. Low temperatures assure better flavor and appearance, less shrinkage and less loss of juices. Stuff cavity well with dressing if desired but do not pack tightly. Consult your cookbook for the length of time to cook your size bird and correct temperature.

We have such an abundance of food from which to select that it is no chore to plan menus. Vegetables, fresh, frozen and canned, are plentiful. The cranberry is with us, a wide selection of fruits and even whipping cream for the pumpkin pie. This might be your Thanksgiving dinner menu:

Thanksgiving Dinner Menu

Clear Soup
Roast Turkey Dressing
Cranberry Sauce Celery
Broccoli Hollandaise Sauce
Creamed Onions Gravy
Calavo-Orange Salad
Pumpkin Pie Cheese
Coffee

Some persons may think that dinner is not complete without mashed potatoes and gravy. If such is the case, be sure that the potatoes are thoroughly cooked, thoroughly mashed, before adding HOT milk and butter, and whipping them to fluffiness.

Good gravy is not a mass of lumps and grease. To make it smooth, rich and brown, follow this procedure:

TURKEY GRAVY

Pour drippings from a roasting pan into a bowl. Skim off as much fat as possible, and put 3 tablespoonfuls of residue into a saucepan. Measure 3 tablespoons flour into the fat, and blend thoroughly. Measure meat juice and add the giblet stock, milk or water to make up 2 cupsful. Set fat and flour mixture over low heat, stirring constantly. Cook until frothy. Add cold liquid all at once, stirring constantly until thickened. Boil briskly about 5 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Yield, about 2 cups.

Hubert Caudles On Honeymoon In New York

Honeymooning in New York are Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Howard Caudle, who were married recently in Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington, Va., with the Rev. Robert W. Long officiating.

Mrs. Caudle is the former Miss Mary Ellen Delano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Harvey Delano, Arlington, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Dow Caudle, Centerville, Ind.

A coronet of net and orange blossoms held the bridal veil of tulle in place and white satin fashioned with fitted bodice and full skirt costumed the bride, who was given in marriage by her father. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and stephanotis.

Attired in turquoise jersey and net, Miss Semena Delano, cousin of the bride, attended her as maid of honor. She carried an arm bouquet of Johanna Hill roses. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Donald Buzzell and Miss Pauline Farabee in peach jersey with matching headdresses and arm bouquets of mixed flowers.

Miss Stanford Becomes Bride Of R. B. Lyon

The Jonestown Baptist Church, Jonestown, Miss., was the scene of the wedding Friday afternoon of Miss Mignonne Louise Stanford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lloyd Stanford, Jonestown, and Richard Bailey Lyon, son of Mrs. Anice Littleton Lyon, Parkfairfax, Alexandria, Va. White tapers and chrysanthemums decorated the church and the Rev. M. E. Armstrong officiated.

A green dressmaker suit with leopard trim, hat and muff, costumed the bride, whose corsage of orchids was attached to her muff. Mr. Stanford gave his daughter in marriage.

Miss Emily Moran attended the bride as maid of honor in a rust-color suit with brown accessories and corsage of talisman roses. Flower girl was Miss Jacqueline Stanford, sister of the bride, in a yellow crepe dress with lace trim and forget-me-nots embroidered around the neckline.

Cooper Littleton was best man and ushers included Robert Marcus, Walter Powell, Richard T. Berry and John Hamilton Grant.

A reception followed the wedding ceremony in the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Stanford was attired in a suit of moss green with brown accessories and corsage of red roses. A brown suit with fuchsia accessories and corsage of red roses costumed the bridegroom's mother.

The bride attended the University of Mississippi.

Miss Costantino Becomes Bride Of Mr. Atino

A crown of seed pearls caught the bridal veil of illusion when Miss Argentina Costantino, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Costantino, exchanged nuptial vows with Edward Atino, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Atino, recently in St. Anthony's Church, with the Rev. John Coady officiating.

Gowned in traditional ivory satin, the bride carried a shower bouquet of white roses tied with love knots. Mr. Constantino gave his daughter in marriage.

Miss Theresa M. Costantino, sister of the bride, attended her as maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Costantino, sister of the bride, and Miss Kathleen Petti. The attendants were gowned in yellow, aqua and fuchsia marquisette with bouquets of pastel chrysanthemums.

Best man was Jack C. Chaconas and ushers were Nicholas C. Chaconas and Augie Urciolo.

A reception followed the ceremony in the Admiral Club with more than 400 guests present. Among them were the grandparents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Marchette, and other close relatives from Richmond, Va.

The bride's mother was costumed in aqua and the mother of the bridegroom in rose. Both wore corsages of orchids.

Farr-Montgomery Engagement Told

Mr. and Mrs. Archie W. Farr announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Hilda Farr, to H. Taylor Montgomery, son of Maj. and Mrs. H. B. Montgomery, Lanham, Md.

The prospective bridegroom plans to resume his studies at Maryland University, where he was a student before serving in the Army with the Sixth Armored Division.

The wedding will take place the latter part of January.

Ronans Take Wedding Trip In Virginia

Following their honeymoon in Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. John Ransart Ronan will return to the bridegroom's home State, Illinois, and make their home in Highland Park. Before her marriage in the Methodist Church, Fredericksburg, Va., recently, the bride was Miss Harriet Eliza Gourley, daughter of Mrs. James David Gourley and the late Mr. Gourley, Fredericksburg. The bridegroom is son of Maj. and Mrs. Frank James Ronan, Highland Park, Ill. The Rev. J. Albert Hughes officiated at the ceremony in a setting of palms, white chrysanthemums and candelabra.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her brother, James Alvin Gourley. Her gown was white satin with marquisette yoke embroidered in seed pearls, long, pointed sleeves and full skirt with train. Her double-tiered veil of illusion fell from a Juliet cap of seed pearls and she carried white orchids, roses and sweetpeas.

Similarly gowned in white brocaded taffeta with off-the-shoulder fitted bodices and full skirts and carrying bouquets of red roses were the bride's attendants: Mrs. John L. Webb, who served her sister as matron of honor; Mrs. David Francis Gourley, the bride's sister-in-law; Mrs. Edwin G. Nelson and Miss Janice Briggs, bridesmaids.

Major Ronan was his son's best man. Ushers were Edwin M. Gourley, brother of the bride; Lawrence B. Whitehouse, jr., Ernest L. Whitehouse and Joseph L. Sorage, jr.

The bride's mother wore floor-length ice-blue crepe with cerise velvet hat and purple orchids, while the bridegroom's mother was gowned in gray crepe with flower hat and orchids. The reception, given by Mr. and Mrs. James A. Gourley, was at the Princess Anne Hotel.

The bride attended Mary Washington College at the University of Virginia. Mr. Ronan, an alumnus of Northwestern University, Evanston, recently returned from 20 months' service in the Pacific and has received his discharge from the Marine Corps.

Benefit Movies To Be Preceded By Many Parties

Many dinners and parties are being given tonight before the benefit showing of movies at the Shoreham Hotel, 9 p. m., by the American Friends for Italian Aid, Inc.

Former Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Joseph C. Grew will be hosts to the Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani. Dorna Julia Branhilla will entertain the guest speakers, Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, National Gallery of Art; Judge Juvenal Marchisio, president of the American Relief for Italy, New York, and the committee members.

Other hosts are Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Huntington and Mrs. Victor Sutro.

The committee has invited 100 convalescents from five service hospitals in this area to see the movies, which will be of particular interest to those who served in the Mediterranean theater.

Reservations may be made at the office of American Friends for Italian Aid, 1601 Fuller st., or by calling AD. 1601.

Iowans Will Enjoy Thanksgiving Dance

Plans have been completed for the Thanksgiving Dance of the Iowa State Society to be held in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel Saturday evening, November 24.

An orchestra will play from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. All Iowans and their friends are invited to attend. An Iowa turkey will be awarded during the evening.

Additional information can be obtained by calling the secretary, Miss Gertrude M. Louis, Hotel Roosevelt, Decatur 0800.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Choice

I
My desk is full of answered letters,
From cherished friends and good works abettors,
Yet how can I ever this mess unravel,
If I'm to help the world out of its travail?

II
All those dear little notes I had planned to write,
During the long wakeful stretches of the night,
To hostesses, brides and mothers of babies,
Must wait if I put heat on Senate "maybes."

III
There are scads of friends I would entertain,
Intimates, newcomers, people of brain,
Yet how can I be the hostess gracious,
And keep watch that the Nations don't get too pugnacious?

IV
I should like to call on the sick and the stranger,
And forget the bomb and its imminent danger,
In doing a round of pleasant small duties,
And drinking my full of nature's beauties.

V
There are teas and luncheons to which I should go,
To show decent friendship to those that I know,
Yet how can I be too socially pleasant,
And keep up with the plight of the Balkan peasant?

VI
There are hems and rips I should sew and mend,
Hats, beads and earrings I should append,
And keep citizen watch on a Senate hearing?

VII
My books are dusty, and things I won't mention,
Need instant and strong armed, soapy attention,
But how keep the lint from under my bed,
And keep up with what Truman and Attlee said?

VIII
The fall woods beckon, and the open road
Suggests a more adventurous episode
Than seeking the why about Palestine,
Dare I succumb to such anodyne?

IX
All the small demands over which I gloss,
Haunt my life like an albatross,
But if I get sunk in their administration,
How can I help to fight inflation?

X
I used to think that the day would come,
When I'd start on a clean curriculum,
A brave new life with a brand new slate,
With time for all tasks, both small and great.

XI
But now I know that's a mirage,
That I cannot stand up to a double barrage
Of duties—so as of time I borrow,
I must serve the now or the tomorrow.

XII
So I say to friends whom I neglect—
This isn't the time to be correct
In minor matters—if this world survives,
We can't afford the luxury of private lives.

Ration Points May Be Same For December

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Ration points for December probably will retain the same values they have now, it was indicated yesterday as OPA and Department of Agriculture began their monthly conferences on what to do about unrationing meat.

Agriculture spokesmen declared the agency is having trouble finding enough meat to meet foreign shipment promises totaling around a billion pounds for the winter.

"And this is with the set-asides we now have on the lower grades of beef," it was declared. "We want these shipments to go through and we think the American people want them to go through."

Trying to End Rationing

OPA's position for several months has been that it wants to end red-point rationing as rapidly as possible. If it cannot be ended, OPA does not want to cut point values down to a "meaningless level."

Supposedly, Price Administrator Chester Bowles sent a letter to President Truman over the week-end asking for the end of meat rationing "unless foreign shipments are to be stepped up." He said "no comment" yesterday on either the letter or its contents, but members of OPA's consumers advisory committee last week asked that Bowles "try to reach the Administration's ears" on the foreign relief matter.

Their attitude was that the country should do more or stop the pretense. "We think the public should know whether enough is being done and that it would willingly accept a tighter rationing—if such is needed," they said.

Pledged to Aid Allies

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson has stated repeatedly that this country is pledged to help its allies "to the limit of our strength" and is keeping the pledge.

For the benefit of persons who do not want anything "given" away, he also points out that two-thirds of the food now going abroad is being paid for on a strict export basis.

"Through UNRRA we are helping foot the bill for only one third of the supplies going for relief feeding," he said. Even UNRRA food is being paid for, on a tax-paying basis. Farmers and other food handlers are getting the money, just as they do on other sales and many of them would be glad to sign themselves up for such export trade on a permanent basis.
